left bank of the Vistula, and the whole of Galicia front up to the environs of Kolomoia, on May 1, great masses of the enemy attacked our position, centering their efforts in the region to the north and south of Przemyśl.

"On the left bank of the Vistula, we not only repulsed furious attacks but assumed the offensive and captured 800 prisoners and numerous guns and machine guns.

"Near Jaroslau, despite our withering artillery fire, which is inflicting immense losses, the Germans are still endeavoring to consolidate their position on the right bank of the San River. Here, during the course of the day, we brought down many hostile aeroplanes, which were correcting the fire of the enemy batteries. Under Przemyśl the artillery fire has been intense, the enemy bombarding the western forts.

"Between Przemyśl and the great marshes of the Dniester masses of the enemy which attacked us reached, in many places, our wire entanglements, but were scattered by our fire. Nevertheless, the enemy succeeded in capturing the trenches of two of our battalions.

"The losses of the enemy in general are estimated by tens of thousands."

The Petrograd correspondent of the Post, calling attention to the fact that the Russians have been compelled to retreat on a 200-mile front, says: "This seems almost incredible and almost compels the belief that the best part of the truth about the whole situation remains hidden."

A story published in London today of the allied attack on Achi Baba, on the Gallipoli Peninsula, indicates that the Turks were unexpectedly strong and that they had built marvellous entrenchments for themselves. It is evident that they made the attacking forces pay a fearful price for the ground won.

In France and Belgium bad weather again is impeding operations, continuous rain and thick mists making vigorous action impossible. The British north of La Bassée and the French north of Arras have held their recent gains, but they have not been able to move forward.

In the House of Lords, yesterday, Lord Kitchener, the War Minister, again warned the public that great sacrifices already had been made and that greater ones would be exacted. He made an appeal for 300,000 more recruits.

The Austrian War Office announces that 14,000 Russian prisoners, 128 guns and 88 machine guns have been captured so far this month.

Australian Submarine Lost.

Confirmation of the previous report of the sinking of the Australian submarine A22 in the Dardanelles is contained in an official communication issued by the admiralty. The statement says the crew of the vessel are prisoners of the Turks. The admiralty communication says:

"A report from Turkish sources states that the submarine A22 of the Australian navy was sunk April 30 while endeavoring to enter the Sea of Marmora and that her crew was captured."

"Further reports from diplomatic channels at Athens say that three officers and 17 men were taken prisoners out of a total of three officers and 22 men aboard the submarine. No communication having been received from this vessel since April 30, her loss must be presumed."

AUSTRIAN OFFERS TO ITALY RECITED IN THE REICHSTAG

German Chancellor Tells of Territorial Concessions Proposed; Still Hopes Alliance Will Hold

BERLIN, May 18.—"You are aware," said Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg, the Imperial Chancellor, speaking in the Reichstag yesterday, "that the relations between Italy and Austria-Hungary within the last month have been strongly strained."

"From the speech made yesterday by Count Tisza you will have gathered that the Vienna Cabinet, in a sincere effort to insure enduring peace between the dual monarchy and Italy and to take into account the lasting great vital interests of both empires, had resolved on far-reaching concessions to Italy of a territorial nature."

Austria's Proposed Concessions.

"I consider it proper to indicate these instances to you:

"1. Part of the Tyrol inhabited by Italians was to be ceded to Italy.

"2. The western bank of the Isonzo, insofar as the population was purely Italian.

"3. Trieste was to be made an imperial free city, receiving an administration which would insure the Italian character of the government and establish an Italian university.

"4. Italian sovereignty over Avlona (a seaport of Albania) and a sphere of influence belonging thereto to be recognized.

"5. Austria-Hungary declared her political disinterestedness regarding Albania.

"6. The national interests of Italians in Austria to be particularly respected.

"7. Austria-Hungary to grant amnesty to political military prisoners belonging to the ceded territory.

"8. The further wishes of Italy regarding the general question to be assured every consideration.

"9. Austria-Hungary, after the conclusion of the agreement, to give a solemn declaration concerning the concessions.

"10. Mixed committees for the regulation of the frontier."

Diplomacy May Still Suffice in the Frye Case

appears not improbable that the German answer, instead of being expected tomorrow or Wednesday, will not be ready before the end of the week. When completed it will first be laid before the Kaiser, Gen. von Falkenhayn, the Chief of Staff, and Admiral von Tirpitz before being delivered to Ambassador Gerard.

Admiral von Tirpitz arrived in Berlin yesterday from Kiel and Wilhelmshafen, where he has been making a tour of inspection of the naval harbors. It may be assumed that he will be taken into conference regarding the answer.

I can say that I found no disposition to seek deliberately a conflict with America, as has been represented at home. Germany is not quite that mad," was the smiling comment of one high official on this suggestion.

None the less, there is no indication that the critical point of the answer will be other than expression of regret, in the most polite and friendly language, in a tone equally cordial with President Wilson's own, that Germany cannot fulfill his hopes. From all I can gather, it is apparently evident that the Government is weighing carefully all the possible consequences of such an answer.

The reply, however, is likely to leave the door open to a further exchange. It seems to be pretty generally recognized in this instance that there is a firm hand in President Wilson's valve glove. It is denied that there will be a

SUBMARINE SINKS PASSENGER SHIP

First folo WASH Submarine Norwegian Vessel, Driven Off by German Raider, Saves People on British Steamer

CARDIFF, Wales, May 18.—The 250-ton British steamer Drumcree, which left Barry yesterday, has been torpedoed in the English Channel. Her passengers and crew were saved.

It was only on account of the bravery shown by the crew of a Norwegian steamer that the passengers and crew were rescued. The Drumcree first was torpedoed off the Cornish coast yesterday, but the projectile failed to sink her. She was taken in tow by the Norwegian steamer, but the submarine started in pursuit and the Norwegian cast her off. A second torpedo finished the Drumcree. She was sinking rapidly when the Norwegian vessel returned and took off those aboard.

The steamer Drumcree was built in Sunderland in 1906. She was of 257 tons.

Law Bars Explosives on Liners, Not Small Arms and Ammunition.

WASHINGTON, May 18.—The claim has been advanced by some of the defenders of Germany that the Lusitania was carrying explosives, in contravention of the United States law, and that her rapid sinking was due to an explosion of this portion of her cargo. The law forbids the taking on board of nitroglycerin, dynamite or other explosive or gunpowder, except for the ship's use, or articles likely to endanger the health or lives of the passengers or the safety of the vessel.

March 4, 1911, the Solicitor of the Department of Commerce ruled that the law permitted the carrying of small arms and ammunition.

ARMY HAT CONTRACTS SCORED

United Hatters Say Government Is Defrauded, Demand Investigation.

NEW YORK, May 18.—The United Hatters of North America, in convention here, have passed a resolution demanding an investigation by the War Department or by Congress into Government contracts for the manufacture of hats for the United States army.

The resolutions charged that the Government was being defrauded and that while the Government paid only $1.10 for the army hat, it should cost $1.25 to manufacture it according to specifications.

COLONIAL TROOPS MOWED DOWN BY HIDDEN TURKS

British Press Representative Says Bombardment of Achi Baba Was Most Stupendous Ever Witnessed—Hills Seemed to Be Afire

LONDON, May 18.—Continuing his story of the three days' battle of Achi Baba from May 6 to 8, the British press representative with the allied forces in the Dardanelles, after describing the battlefield and declaring that not a Turk nor a Turkish trench was visible, added:

"Only the allied forces, the English on the left, the French on the right, the British colonials and territorial troops, the French foreign legion in reserve were to be seen. Time and again long waves of French colonials swept forward, but no sooner did they leave the shelter of their trenches than the Turks, who had been lying absolutely quiet, opened up a tremendous fire from concealed trenches."

Turks Could Not Be Shaken Out.

"Each day's attacks were preceded by furious shell fire from the warships, but the Turks could not be shaken, and our infantry advances met such an iron hail that the line wavered and then broke. The fire which the Turks developed was undesirable and it was impossible to locate their batteries."

Describing the third day's fighting, the correspondent says:

"At 5:15 o'clock in the afternoon there suddenly opened from every ship afloat and battery ashore the most stupendous bombardment ever witnessed. Fifteen-inch and 12-inch shells charged with lyddite caused the most terrible explosions, apparently consuming entire hills. Smaller shells, both lyddite and shrapnel, searched every yard of the slopes and sprayed the country between Achi Baba and our trenches. The noise was frightful, the hills echoing the detonations of thousands of projectiles."

"The whole region did not have the appearance of being shelled but seemed as if it had suddenly been set afire. It was covered with a solid bank of yellow, green and white smoke whence numberless volcanoes burst into eruption. The bombardment lasted a quarter hour. According to all preconceived notions, the enemy should have been wiped out and incapable of resisting an infantry advance. Not a single Turk was visible and their artillery had not fired a round. Suddenly the guns ceased fire and as one man the entire line of in-

GERMANY CANNOT YIELD TO U.S., SAYS BERLIN PRESS

Newspapers Cite Tactics of British Merchantmen in Ramming Submarine to Show Search of Vessels Is Impossible.

BERLIN, via London, May 18.—Last evening's newspapers, discussing the American note to Germany, are agreed that it is impossible for Germany to abandon her submarine warfare. Various papers point out what they regard as the inconsistency of the Washington Government "in asserting against Germany the right of American citizens to go wherever they please on the sea, but abandoning that right against England and also in admitting 'the legality of England's declaration of a war zone but protesting against Germany's submarine zone.'"

It is further pointed out by the newspapers that the American note admits the right of German vessels to search British vessels and to capture them if they are carrying contraband. But it is declared that Washington must know this right is rendered illusory through England's course of arming merchantmen and ordering them to ram submarines. "By which Capt. to West's arming merchantmen's submarine commanders who sank the Hogue, the Cressy and the Aboukir lost his life."

The newspapers complain that the note is fully in accord with the English standpoint that the Lusitania was a harmless merchant vessel and ignores the fact that she was armed and carrying munitions. The Kreuz Zeitung asserts that Germany was thoroughly right in demanding that neutrals avoid the war zone.

The Tagliche Rundschau says: "Owing to the presence on board the

ENGLAND EXTENDS LIMIT FOR SHIPMENT OF GERMAN GOODS

Americans Given Until June 15 to Get Consignments Purchased Before March 1.

WASHINGTON, May 18.—The British Government today gave notice to the State Department that it had extended to June 15 the time within which German goods may be shipped to America from neutral ports, provided they were purchased before March 1 last.

Soon after the terms of the order in council the British Government undertook to allow the export of German and Austrian goods which had been bought by Americans through neutral ports, such as Holland and Denmark, upon the issue of a special permit in each case. Under the terms of these permits shipments must be made before June 1 and today's notice extended that period 15 days.

Complaint of continued detention of cotton cargoes in British ports are said at the British embassy to be due in many cases to the failure of the American shippers to state the contract price of the cotton, a necessary factor in view of the right reserved by the British Government to purchase such cargoes.

WELLSTON MAN, A PIANIST, DIES IN EDWARDSVILLE JAIL

Had Come Before Relatives Could Be Communicated With—Charge of Forgery Caused Arrest.

John Norris, 28 years old, of Wellston, a pianist, died last night in the jail at Edwardsville, Ill., after pleading with the jailer to summon his father to his bedside. Norris died before his relatives could be communicated with. The coroner's jury is expected to return a verdict of death from alcoholism.

E. C. Mason, proprietor of Lakeside Park, a summer resort at Horsehoe Lake, three miles from Granite City, had Norris arrested last Saturday on a charge of forgery. He said that he employed Norris three weeks ago as a pianist, and that a week later he sent Norris to mail several letters, one of which contained a check. Mason later learned that the check was missing.

Norris did not return to the park, and was arrested in St. Louis.

DYER FOR FORTIFYING HAWAII

Congressman L. C. Dyer returned yesterday from the Hawaiian Islands, which he visited as a member of a Congressional delegation of 10 Senators and 36 Representatives to study the fortification requirements and the industrial conditions.

Congressman Dyer believes that $15,000,000 would be needed during the next three years to complete work under way on the fortifications and the naval station. He expressed the opinion that the safety of the Pacific Coast made necessary the adequate fortification of the islands as a naval base.

For Extreme Perspiration

To dainty women and particular men, Odo-ro-no is most necessary.

Why?

Because it gives complete relief from extreme perspiration of the armpits, feet, hands or neck—a condition that has caused them to obtain relief—so much annoyance and discomfort.

Two applications a week of Odo-ro-no will keep these parts comfortably and naturally dry and absolutely odorless. Dress shields become unnecessary. Daily baths do not lessen the effect. Harmless—easily applied. Get your bottle of

"LITERARY" TEST NOT REQUIRED OF UNSKILLED LABOR

Chairman Rogers Says Politicians' Charges Against City Efficiency Board Are False.

Thomas H. Rogers, chairman of the City Efficiency Board, addressing the City Club at luncheon today, said that politicians had sought to bring the board into ridicule by representing that it required mental and "literary" tests of unskilled laborers. He said all stories to this effect were absolutely false, and that unskilled laborers were not required even to know how to read and write. But the board, he said, is determined to carry out the charter provisions by giving unskilled laborers, as well as others, such a test as shall show their fitness for the work they have to do.

Civil Service News Speak.

Herman W. Craven of Seattle and Charles M. Galloway of South Carolina, national civil service commissioners, and Charles Hendricks, secretary of the commission for the Ninth District, stationed in St. Louis, spoke after Rogers.

Rogers' talk was of special interest because of his recent semi-controversy with Mayor Kiel over some details of the board's examinations, and because of the charges made by Rogers in an interview in the Post-Dispatch, that politicians were trying to nullify the civil service provision of the new charter.

"In everything the board has tried to do," said Rogers, in his City Club talk, "we have met some obstacles. We can feel and see the obstacle, but we don't always know who's in the rear shoving, though we can guess."

Stories Are True.

"An effort is being made—by whom it is not hard to figure—to keep unskilled laborers from being included in the classified service. That is, it is desired to have laborers put on without any test. For that reason, the stories of mental and literary tests for day laborers have been circulated, stories which are absolutely false."

Rogers displayed application blanks, which state that another person may sign for an applicant who cannot write, to disprove the "literary" test story. But he said the board was determined that every such applicant should show himself fit for the rough work he would have to do if appointed. He need not be a Hercules, Rogers said, but he must have adequate sight, hearing and physical ability, whether he is a first-class unskilled laborer or a white wing.

Opposed by Organizations.

"The Democratic organization," he remarked, "is just as much opposed to the proper carrying out of this provision as the other. Both organizations know that if unskilled labor is open, as in the old system, they cannot count on 3000 to 2000 votes, at every election, from men who are held in these jobs by political influence."

Premier Tells Commons Contemplated Changes Will Not Affect His Office or That of Foreign Secretary and Involve No Political Surrender.

PLAN TO PUSH WAR WITH ALL ENERGY

Lord Fisher Forces Shakeup; Kitchener May Turn War Office Over to Lloyd-George and Take Command in the Field.

By Associated Press. LONDON, May 18.—Premier Asquith announced in the House of Commons today that steps were in contemplation which involved a reconstruction of the Government upon a broader personal and political basis.

The Premier said: "Nothing has been definitely arranged as yet, but in order to avoid any possible misapprehension I wish to make clear here and now three things.

"First, any changes will not affect the position of the Prime Minister or of the Foreign Secretary; second, there will be no change in the policy of the country as regards the continued prosecution of the war with all possible energy and by means of every available resource, and third and last, and of great importance to the honorable friends behind me, and I have no doubt, to the opposition, and this: Any reconstruction of the Cabinet that may be made will be for the purposes of the war alone and is not to be taken in any quarter or for any reason as indicating anything in the nature of a surrender or a compromise on the part of any person or body of persons of their several political ideals.

"This is as far as I can go. Nothing definite yet has taken place, but if any arrangement is made the House will have the fullest opportunity of expressing its views."

In interest of the Nation. The references of the Premier to the prosecution of the war were greeted with loud and prolonged cheering. The Prime Minister was followed by Andrew Bonar Law, leader of the Opposition, who said:

"I think it only necessary to say on behalf of my friends and self that at the time this has been reached, our only consideration in regard to the further steps to be taken is what is the best method of finishing the war successfully and we leave out of our minds absolutely all considerations, political and otherwise beyond that."

"Of course, if such an arrangement should take place it is obvious our convictions on other subjects will remain unchanged, and will be settled when the war is over."

Meaning of the Changes. Speaking in the Guild Hall today, at a meeting called to thank the colonies publicly for the way they have rallied to the help of the mother country, Andrew Bonar Law, opposition leader in the House of Commons, referring to the possibility of political changes in the Government, said:

"Such a combination would be useless, and perhaps worse than useless, except as a means to a combination of the nation—a nation organized from top to bottom for the purpose of ending this war."

Law spoke from the same platform as Premier Asquith, the latter also having addressed the Colonial meeting.

The Cabinet changes have been precipitated by Lord Fisher of Kilmorack, Admiral of the Fleet and First Sea Lord of the Admiralty, who was brought from retirement in the early months of the war to take office, for the sole reason that he possessed the confidence of the navy as no other British seaman did. Lord Fisher, since the commencement of the Dardanelles expedition, has found himself continually at odds with his civilian chief, Winston Spencer Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty.

These differences eventually became so acute that Lord Fisher has handed in his resignation, and in doing so, has forced the Liberal ministry—already weakened from a variety of causes—the failure of the Lloyd-George anti-drink program, the reported inability of the army to secure urgently needed ammunition, and others—to accept the aid of the Unionists.

Some of the Contingencies. These are some of the contingencies presented to England, in consequence, today:

Earl Kitchener may leave the War Office, to be succeeded by David Lloyd-George, the present Chancellor of the Exchequer, and go to France to take an active command in the field.

Lord Haldane, the Chancellor, Lewis Harcourt, the Colonial Secretary, and Reginald McKenna, the Home Secretary, probably will resign, to be succeeded in their respective offices by the present Lord Chief Justice, Lord Reading, by Austin Chamberlain, son of the late Joseph Chamberlain, Union leader, and by Andrew Bonar Law, leader of the Opposition.

Both John Redman, leader of the Irish Nationalists, and Sir Edward Carson, leader of the Ulster Nationalists, may enter the new Cabinet as colleagues, the former as Secretary of State for Ireland and the latter in an equally important post not yet in view.

It has been settled definitely that some form of Cabinet reorganization is under way, but outside of Downing street and a few leaders of political parties other than Liberals, the exact changes will not be known definitely until Premier Asquith is ready to announce his plans. There is a widespread belief that al-

Chinese Guests Inspect Factories and Schools

The 16 Honorary Commissioners of the Republic of China today, on the second and final day of their visit to St. Louis, inspected different industrial plants, according to the individual business interests of the members. Several chose to spend the greater part of the time in visiting the shoe factories, while two, particularly interested in education, visited the high and grammar schools and Washington University.

They were guests at the Business Men's League luncheon at the Planters today, and plans were made to take them through the residence district this afternoon. Edward Hildan, president of the Business Men's League, will be their host at a farewell dinner at the St. Louis Club tonight. They will leave at midnight for Chicago.

At the Sunset Hill Country Club last night, Chang Chen Hsun, president of the commission, spoke of the possibilities of Chinese trade with St. Louis and other cities. Any reconstruction of the Cabinet that may be made will be for the purposes of the war alone and is not to be taken in any quarter or for any reason as indicating anything in the nature of a surrender or a compromise on the part of any person or body of persons of their several political ideals.

though Baron Fisher has resigned, such arrangements will be made as will enable him to retain his post under the new First Lord of the Admiralty, if he does not assume the first lordship himself.

Regarding the Lord chancellors, the position of the Lord Chancellor could take the position on account of his Jewish faith, as the Lord Chancellor is "keeper of the King's conscience."

All parties are working earnestly to mobilize the strong men of England and bring about the solution best calculated to enable the country to pursue the war. The trouble has long been brewing and most people do not hesitate to side with Lord Northcliffe, the most influential newspaper man in Great Britain, proprietor of the Times and Daily Mail.

Furthermore there is at least a hint to be heard among those close to the inner circle of the Unionist councils that Field Marshal Sir John French, commander in chief in the field, has, to some extent, at least upheld Northcliffe's hands.

Needed Shells, Not Supplies. Those who take this view, however, do not ascribe any unworthy motive to the commander in chief. His desire, though unexpressed, working through Lord Northcliffe, is said to have been solely due to his conviction that he and his men were not receiving the support from the Government to which they were entitled, especially in the failure of the War Office to supply them with the urgently needed high-explosive shells.

Those who take this viewpoint in the fact that it was only after Lord Northcliffe had visited the front in person as a guest of Sir John French that his newspaper batteries were turned upon not only Mr. Churchill, but upon Earl Kitchener. This view is supported, moreover, by the Times editorial, which attacks Earl Kitchener for the first time, specifically declaring, that through his insistence upon keeping in his own hands control of all matters, confusion resulted and that "the requests and warnings from the front about the need for high explosive have been grievously disregarded."

Instead of this, the Times says, Kitchener has persisted in sending over shrapnel, which, deadly against troops in the open, is absolutely valueless against entrenched positions, and this, in the face of the act of the French in steadily increasing their proportion of high explosives.

The Unionist dissatisfaction with Mr. Churchill in the Admiralty is of much longer standing, and dates back to his spectacular and ineffectual sortie to Antwerp a few days before that city fell, with the result that the naval brigade narrowly escaped being entrapped in the city and falling into the German hands in a body.

Lord Fisher's quarrel with his chief, it is said, began with the Dardanelles expedition. A curious feature of this episode is the belief in Liberal circles that the point on which Lord Fisher threw his whole weight against the Government's decision—the first attack on the Dardanelles by the fleet, unsupported by land forces—was really originated by Mr. Balfour, as a member of the Committee on Imperial Defence.

Inasmuch as Mr. Balfour is now said to be stated to succeed Churchill, Liberal leaders are wondering whether Lord Fisher will find it easier to agree with him than with his predecessor, Lord Fisher, it is now said, from the outset opposed the project to attack the Dardanelles until the assault could be made with the support of a powerful land force. He was overruled summarily, however, and his dissent only became known with his resignation. The result, however, in the view of military and naval critics was little reason to believe, according to the Times, that with wonderful heroism and suffering terrible losses, has been able to make but woefully little headway.

Despite the blunders which are thus charged against both of both branches of the service, there is little reason to believe, according to the Times, that with wonderful heroism and suffering terrible losses, has been able to make but woefully little headway.

None the less, the rank and file of the Liberal party are meeting the situation with cheerfulness. They take the attitude from their leaders that the Premier has made the best of an extremely difficult situation; that the "Unionist cabal which bent on nothing less than driving the entire ministry out of office, and that Unionist leaders, inexperienced as they may be, undoubtedly command the respect and confidence of a considerable section of the country; and that it is best to have the whole question settled and to settle down single-mindedly to the task of prosecuting the war to a successful finish.

The prospect that John Redmond and Sir Edward Carson will find themselves colleagues is regarded as a little more than a piquant possibility. The members of the Nationalist party are bound by a self-governing ordinance to accept no office in any government until home rule is in effect. The only argument for Mr. Redmond over this position is that the present situation is entirely unprecedented and that home rule is as good as in effect now.

WASHINGTON, May 18.—Responsibility for the Colorado coal strike was laid at the door of minor officials of the coal companies directly in touch with the men, in testimony today before the Industrial Relations Commission, by the Rev. Eugene S. Giddis, a Methodist clergyman and former superintendent of the sociological work for the Colorado Fuel and Iron Co. Minor officials in touch with the men were "brutes and blasphemous bullies," he said.

"Did you find that generally to be the case?" asked Chairman Walsh.

"Yes, sir, I did."

Walsh asked if there were no State officers to protect workers against cruelties at the hands of minor bosses.

"The State of Colorado is represented in the closed camps and in some of the open camps by Justices of the Peace, who were company men," said Giddis. "Coal at any cost, was the avowed policy of the small bosses. One of them told me that a drunken spree was good for a miner, because he worked harder to make up after the spree."

Sub-Bosses in Politics. Influence of the sub-bosses of the Colorado company was important in politics, Giddis said. He said in the national election in November, 1914, he saw a mine store manager and a local superintendent acting as election judges at the polls in violation of the State law. Sociological conditions in the camps, while considerable betterment work had been undertaken, were generally bad and "cursed by saloon associations" and in many cases "disreputably disgraceful."

One of the directors of the company, he said, told him in Denver a few years ago:

"We might as well confess it, we have not given the miners anything but the saloon."

Giddis thought the company profited by the camp saloon.

Twenty-five years ago, he said, four-fifths of the population of the Colorado mines spoke the English language. Not long before the strike, however, he asserted, "the ratio was exactly reversed and only one-fifth of the employees were English-speaking."

"We were informed," he said, "that foreign men, given the preferred places, because they were better money makers. Aliens were encouraged to crowd out the higher grade workers."

Saloon Chamber of Horrors. "The policy of the company," said the witness, "to condone parading out camp saloons, built up a company of thugs, to human ghoul, who operate their illegals in connivance with the Marshals. Saloons, after pay days, are chambers of horrors, and outlaws are fattening on the earnings of the miners with the tacit approval of Mr. Rockefeller's officials."

"Is it a fact," asked Chairman Walsh, "that the Colorado Fuel and Iron Co. still has control of politics in Colorado?"

"They control it as far as they dare," Giddis replied, "although I do not think they do it to such an extent as before the strike, when they were completely controlled by the strike."

Chairman Walsh read into the record a letter sent to the commission by John D. Rockefeller Jr., written by L. M. Bowers, chairman of the executive department of the company, in May, 1912. The Colorado Fuel and Iron Co. for many years, he wrote, were accused of being the political dictator of Southern Colorado and in fact were a mighty power in the entire State. When I came here it was said that the C. F. and I. Co. voted every man and woman in their employment about any regard to their political or religious beliefs. He stated that the company was not big enough to hold Mr. Barnes and myself."

In regard to that quotation the Colonel almost shouted that it was false. He said he did tell Hutchinson that he was present, during the last gubernatorial election in this State, to support a Republican candidate who would wage war on Republican and Democratic "crookedness," but that he could not be expected to come back into the Republican party as long as it was dominated by men of the stamp of Mr. Barnes."

The Colonel flatly contradicted Barnes' testimony about the talk in the White House over the Agnew-Hart racing bill, and about many other things. He repeated with added emphasis his statement that Barnes had told him of men identified with big business interests who had contributed large sums of money to both parties.

The Colonel was most active on the witness stand. Several times while he was testifying the spectators in the crowded courtroom had to be brought to order by Justice Andrews.

Col. Roosevelt yesterday on the stand told what he represented to be the true details of an interview he had about a year ago with John W. Hutchinson Jr., a New York lawyer, who swore on the witness stand last week that the former President had told him that "the Republican party is not big enough to hold Mr. Barnes and myself."

SUMMING UP IN BARNES' LIBEL CASE IS BEGUN

Counsel for Roosevelt Contents Colonel Was Justified in His Statements.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., May 18.—John M. Bowers, chief counsel for Theodore Roosevelt, today summed up in the Supreme Court here the case of the defense in William Barnes' suit for libel. He assailed the truth of many of the statements made on the witness stand by the plaintiff and presented arguments to the jury designed to show that his client was justified in saying the things he did about the former chairman of the Republican State Committee.

The lawyers contended that the suit was not brought with the purpose of obtaining pecuniary damages but in reality was a "game to lower the defendant before the people of the United States."

Counsel for Barnes were to sum up during the afternoon session.

Justice William S. Andrews will deliver his charge to the jury tomorrow morning, according to the present plans. In that event the case will be in the hands of the jury before noon tomorrow.

On the opening of court Henry L. Wolf, of counsel for Barnes, made a motion to strike from the record evidence regarding printing elicited from Barnes on cross-examination. The motion was denied.

Directed Verdict Asked. A motion that the jury be directed to find a verdict for the plaintiff was then made. This was based primarily upon the ground that no evidence in justification had been offered for various portions of the alleged libelous article which the Court had held to be libel per se. Wolf called particular attention to that part of the article upon which the suit was based in which Barnes' name was linked with that of Charles F. Murphy, leader of Tammany, and in which it was stated the Murphy was "aided and abetted" by Barnes. Wolf also laid particular emphasis on the fact that much of the evidence offered in justification was based on alleged happenings of many years ago.

In reply, said he would restrict the jury's consideration to two charges—the general charge that there was a corrupt alliance between Barnes and Murphy and that Barnes worked through an alliance between crooked business and crooked politics.

Outline His Charge. In regard to the first charge, Justice Andrews said the jury had a right to consider the evidence in regard to the alleged combination that is claimed to have resulted in the deadlock of 1911 over the election of a United States Senator. In regard to the second charge he said the justification seemed to be based on evidence regarding conversations between the plaintiff and defendant about 15 years ago. The motion to direct the jury to find a verdict in favor of the plaintiff was then denied.

Justice Andrews, in reply, said he would restrict the jury's consideration to two charges—the general charge that there was a corrupt alliance between Barnes and Murphy and that Barnes worked through an alliance between crooked business and crooked politics.

Colonel on Stand Yesterday. Col. Roosevelt yesterday on the stand told what he represented to be the true details of an interview he had about a year ago with John W. Hutchinson Jr., a New York lawyer, who swore on the witness stand last week that the former President had told him that "the Republican party is not big enough to hold Mr. Barnes and myself."

City Assessor Whose Conduct in Office Is to Be Investigated

FRANK W. SCHRAMM.

Alderman Koenig of the Twenty-Seventh Ward will introduce a resolution in the Board of Aldermen Friday night to have a committee investigate Schramm's official conduct in relation to his appointment of district assessors and the charge of one of them that the Assessor asked him to get whatever business he could for Schramm's real estate firm.

Aldermen to Ask for Inquiry Into Assessor's Acts

more years of his term to serve. He receives a salary of $500 a year, although the new charter provides a $500 salary for the Assessor. His son, William C. Schramm, is his Chief Deputy, at a salary of $240.

Board Is Republican. The entire Board of Aldermen is Republican. In the event of a vacancy in the Assessor's office, appointment of the successor would be made by Mayor Kiel, a Republican. Schramm, in selecting 12 of the 20 eligible candidates, recommended for deputies by the Efficiency Board, has chosen nine Democrats and three Republicans.

Mockler today reiterated that it was Assessor Frank Schramm, and not the Assessor's son, William Schramm, who had invited him to look out for real estate business for the Schramm firm while acting as a Deputy Assessor, in return "for the favor" of having been appointed by them to an $1800-a-year city position.

Son Takes Blame. Assessor Schramm, in a statement to the Post-Dispatch late yesterday, had denied that he had made such a statement to Mockler. The blame for the statement was shouldered by William Schramm, the Chief Deputy Assessor.

Young Schramm, in explanation of the incident, said he made the request of Mockler last Saturday morning while seated at his own desk, which, he said, is 100 feet from his father's private desk in the Assessor's office at the city hall. When told of young Schramm's statement, Mockler said the conversation occurred in Assessor Frank Schramm's private office at the city hall, and that young Schramm was present when the elder Schramm made the request to him about throwing any real estate business he could to the Schramm family firm. He said the conversation took place Friday morning, and not Saturday morning, as young Schramm had declared.

Assessor Is Reticent. Assessor Schramm said that as soon as he learned, through newspaper reports, that his son had made such a request of Mockler, he rebuked his son for having done so.

When told of Mockler's reticence of his charge yesterday, Chief Deputy William Schramm, in the presence of his father, said he would denounce the statement as a lie if Mockler should make it in his presence.

Assessor Schramm did not visit his office at the city hall yesterday until about 3 p. m., and could not be found by reporters at the real estate office, 519 Chestnut street, in the morning. When he arrived at the city hall, he indicated that he did not desire to discuss the Mockler incident, and answered questions with few words.

When asked why he had returned resignations with blank date to 11 Deputy Assessors yesterday, after the Mockler incident became public, the Assessor said: "It was only intended to hold those resignations until the appointment of each man was approved and his bond was filed. As soon as the men qualified and took the oath before the City Register, I returned their resignations."

When reminded that on Monday he had told a reporter that it was his purpose to hold the blank resignations during the continuance in office of deputies in having to dislodge men, Assessor Schramm added: "Well, that was another reason for requesting the resignations."

ANOTHER OF SHIPS DRIVEN AWAY FROM LUSITANIA, IN PORT

Officers of Narragansett Confirm Story That Submarine Prevented Rescue Work.

NEW YORK, May 18.—Officers of the British tank steamer Narragansett, which arrived at Bayonne, N. J., so firmly today the statements made by officers of the steamer Etanan at Boston, that the Narragansett, which caught the Lusitania's distress signal, was driven off her course by a torpedo from a submarine when she came within seven miles of the scene of the disaster.

According to Talbot Smith, wireless operator on the Narragansett, the Lusitania's call for help was received at 2 o'clock on the afternoon of May 7. It read "Strong list, come quick." Capt. Charles Harwood ordered full steam ahead. His boat was about 35 miles from the Lusitania.

Second Officer John Leet said he sighted a submarine at 3:15 o'clock and an instant later saw a torpedo shoot past the Narragansett within 30 feet of her stern and disappear. Capt. Harwood then changed his course, and gave up the race for the Lusitania, believing that the distress signal was a decoy message to trap the Narragansett.

ENGLISH ESTIMATE PUTS LOSSES OF GERMANS AT 2,000,000 MEN

LONDON, May 18.—The total of the German losses on both fronts up to March 31 was close to 1,500,000 men, and the losses since that date are certainly sufficient to put the present total over the 2,000,000 mark, in the opinion of the Chronicle, which says:

"We have received what purports to be an authoritative statement of the casualties in the German ranks from the beginning of the war until March 23." It then goes on to declare that in its possession are 225 published German casualty lists, of which 180 are classified under "Feb. 14," as follows: Dead, officers, 10,951; men, 237,467; wounded officers, 19,630; men, 720,406; missing officers, 1853; men, 178,997. The total so classified is 1,175,481.

The Chronicle estimates that the following 45 lists will add at least 500,000 more to this total, and probably more, and that the struggles in the Carpathians and the tremendous fighting in Flanders, together with the last six weeks' casualties not yet classified, will bring the total over the 2,000,000 mark.

Men, Friday. The merchants will make special announcements to you, Mr. Particular Dresser, in Friday's Post-Dispatch. Look for them.

JEFFERSON CITY, May 18.—The State's ouster suit against Swift & Co., Armour & Co., Hammond Packing Co., and the St. Louis Dressing & Provision Co., were taken from the Missouri Supreme Court to the United States Supreme Court yesterday by a writ of error filed by an attorney for the companies.

The companies were charged with violating the Missouri anti-trust laws. The State Supreme Court ousted the companies and fined each $25,000, but the ouster order was to be stayed on payment of the fine and adherence to the Missouri statutes in the future.

BRITISH IN FIELD EXPECT TWO TO FOUR YEARS OF WAR, POST-DISPATCH MAN FINDS

Army Beginning to Realize It Is an Amateur Fighting the Professional Champion, He Writes From the Front.

By E. Alexander Powell,

A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

(Copyright, 1915, by Press Pub. Co.)
BRITISH HEADQUARTERS IN FRANCE, May 19.—Along a road in the outskirts of that French town which is the British headquarters, a young man was running. He was considerably less than medium height and fair-haired and very slender. One would have described him as a nice-looking boy. He wore a jersey and white running shorts, which left his knees bare, and he was bareheaded. Shoulders, back and chest well out, he jogged along at the steady dog trot adopted by athletes and prize fighters who are in training.

Now, in ordinary times, there isn't anything particularly remarkable in seeing a scantily clad young man dog-trotting along a country road. You assume that he is training, and you let it go at that. But these are not ordinary times in France, and ordinary young men in running shorts are not permitted to trot along the roads as they like in the immediate vicinity of the British headquarters. Even if you travel as I did in a large gray car with an officer of the French general staff for companion, you are halted every few minutes by a sentry, who turns the business end of his rifle in your direction and demands to see your papers.

No One Challenged Runner.
But no one challenged the young man in the running shorts, or demanded to see his papers. Instead, whenever a soldier caught sight of him that soldier clicked his heels together and stood rigidly at attention. After you had observed the curious effect which the appearance of this young man produced on the military of all ranks it suddenly struck you that his face was strangely familiar. Then you remembered that you had seen it hundreds of times in the magazines and the illustrated papers. Under it was the caption:

"His Royal Highness, the Prince of Wales."

That young man will, some day, if he lives and as goes well with the present system of government in Great Britain, sit in an ancient chair in Westminster Abbey and place a crown upon his head and his picture will appear on coins and postage stamps in use over half of the globe.

Training for Battle.
Now, the future King of England is not getting up at daybreak these chilly spring mornings and reeling off a half a dozen miles or so because he particularly enjoys it. He is doing it for precisely the same reason that the prize fighter does it—he is training for battle.

To me there was something wonderfully significant and characteristic in the sight of that young man plugging doggedly along a country road. He seemed to epitomize the spirit which I found to exist along the whole length of the British battle line. Every soldier in France has come to realize that he is engaged in a struggle without parallel in history, a struggle in which he is confronted by a formidable, ferocious and resourceful opponent, and from which he is by no means certain to emerge a victor; and he is therefore methodically and systematically preparing to win that struggle just as a pugilist prepares himself for a battle in the prize ring.

Every British soldier in France has come to a realization of the terrible gravity of the situation that faces him. You don't hear him singing "Tipperary" any more, or boasting about what he is going to do when he gets to Berlin. He has come to have a most profound respect for the fighting qualities of the men in the spiked helmets.

Amateur vs. Professional Champion.
He knows that he, an amateur boxer, as it were, is up against the world's heavyweight professional champion, and he realizes, to use his own expression, that he has "one hell of a job" in front of him. He has already found to his cost and to his great disgust that his opponent has no intention of being hampered by the rules laid down by the late Marquis of Queensberry. One of these days, however, when he is quite ready, he expects to give that opponent the surprise of his life by landing on him with both feet, spikes on his shoes and brass knuckles on his fingers.

Meanwhile, like the young Prince in the running shorts, he has buckled down with grim determination to the task of getting himself into condition.

I suppose that, if I were really politic and far-sighted, I would cuddle up to the War Office and make myself solid with the General Staff by confidently asserting that the British army is the most efficient killing machine in existence, and that its complete and early triumph is as certain as that sparks fly upward. Neither of these assertions would be true, though in saying this I am perfectly aware that I am inviting the blue pencil of censors.

Marvel in Military History.
It should be borne in mind that the British did not begin the building of their war machine until about nine months ago, while the German organization is the result of upwards of half a century of unceasing thought, experiment and endeavor. But what the British have accomplished in these nine months is one of the marvels of military history.

The machine that they have knocked together, though still a trifle wobbly and somewhat creaky in its joints, is, I am convinced, eventually going to do the business. It struck me as having all, or nearly all, of the merits of the German organization, with the human element added.

You can't really appreciate what this British war machine is like or what it is accomplishing by reading about it. You have to see it for yourself, as I did. And it is by no means easy to see, either, for along the thirty-odd miles of battle front held by the British, war correspondents are about as welcome as the smallpox.

For miles and miles roads are lined with huge English lorries, in their war coat of elephant gray, with converted London buses and with ambulances, until you begin to wonder if there are any automobiles left in England.

Traffic Police and Speed Laws.
So crowded are the highways behind the British front that at the street corners in the towns and at the cross roads in the country are posted military police, with scarlet flags who control the traffic, just as do the policemen in American cities. The roads are never permitted to fall into despair. Road gangs and steam rollers are constantly at work. There are speed limits signs posted everywhere, heretofore practically unknown in France, where anyone who was careless enough to get run over was liable to arrest for obstructing the traffic.

At frequent intervals along the roads are blacksmith shops and automobile repair stations. On the door of every house, whether cottage or chateau, is marked in chalk the number of men who can be billeted in it. There are signs indicating where water can be obtained and fodder and pasturage. The things that interest most, however, were the transports. That "an army marches on its belly" is as true today as when Napoleon said it; and the army service corps is keeping filled the belly of the British soldier. It is, by the way, a significant fact that, while the efficiency of the British transports is steadily increasing, that of the Germans is, because of shortage of rubber and the poor quality of its gasoline, as steadily decreasing.

The work being done by the army medical corps is no less remarkable than that of its sister branch of the service. The business of getting the wounded from the firing line to the hospitals has been so systematized and speeded up that, as one Tommie remarked, "You 'ears a 'ell of a noise, and then the nurse says, 'Sit up and take this broth.'"

The Spirit That Counts.
But no matter how systematically the army service corps may deliver marmalade and cartridges to the trenches, and no matter how quickly the army medical corps may get the wounded from those trenches into the surgeon's hands, the thing that really counts, when all is said and done, is the spirit of the men themselves.

The British soldier of this new army has none of the rollicking, devil-may-care recklessness of the traditional Tommy Atkins. He has not joined the army from any spirit of adventure or because he wanted to see the world. He is not an adventurer; he is a crusader. With him it is a deadly serious business. He has not enlisted because he wanted to enlist or because he had to, but because he felt he ought to.

In ninety-nine cases out of a hundred he has left a family, a comfortable home and a good job behind him. And unlike the stay-at-homes in England, he doesn't make the mistake of underrating his enemy.

He knows that the headlines which appear regularly in the English papers, exultantly announcing "Another British Advance" are buncombe. He knows that it isn't a question of advance but of hanging on. He knows that he will have to fight with every ounce of fight there is in him if he is to remain where he is now. He knows that before the Germans can be driven out of Belgium, much less across the Rhine, all England will be wearing crepe.

Knows Enemy Is Not Weakening.
He knows that there is no truth in the reports that the enemy is weakening. He knows it because he hasn't vainly thrown himself in successive waves against the unyielding wall of steel.

He knows that it is going to be a long war. Every British officer or soldier with whom I have talked—and I have talked with a great many of them—has said that he expects that the spring of this will find them in virtually the same position that they hold now. They will gain ground in some places, of course, and lose ground in others; but a year or so, the men in the trenches believe, will see no radical alteration in the present western battle line.

Such is the opinion of the men who are doing the fighting. All of this of course will not make pleasant reading in England, where the Government and certain sections of the press have given the people the impression that Germany is already beaten to her knees, and that it is all over but the shouting.

Out along the battle front, however, in the trenches and around the campfires and in the hospitals, you do not hear the men discussing "the terms of peace we will grant Germany," or "what we will do with the Kaiser." They are not talking much, they are not singing much, they are not boasting at all; but they have settled down to the Herculean task that lies before them, with the same bulldog tenacity of purpose, that same grim determination which characterized the men who wore the blue in the darkest days of the Civil War.

Side Whiskers as art—

Francis Ford, original hero of the side-whisker stunt, was one of the first actors to recognize bread and butter in moving pictures. He is a P. P. P., pioneer picture player, with as many skins as a piece of birch bark. He not only acts, but he directs, produces and writes scenarios, preferring the home-baked kind to the incoherent plots sent in by correspondence school athletes. Do you recall him as the polished villain in "Lucille Love"? He likes to play the bad man, but he's as sunny as California.

Ford is at Universal City, the only moving-picture city in existence—the queerest, maddest, wildest, most romantic and picturesque city in the world. It has nearly 3,000 people in it, all actors, actresses or stage folk of some description. There's where most of the Universal program is made—the program that has made and is making money for the exhibitor and fast friends of all the fans. WATCH FOUND ON A SUSPECT

Woman's Timepiece Has Initials "L. L." and Contains Man's Picture. The initials "L. L." on a woman's gold watch found in possession of a negro youth arrested on suspicion early this morning, may reveal a robbery which has not yet been reported, the police believe. The watch contained a man's photo. The negro also had a bracelet from which the watch had been torn. A razor found in his possession also is held as evidence. The negro was arrested at 2:30 a. m. at Boyle and Vandeventer avenues. He is at the Magnolia avenue station.

PRESIDENT MAKES CLEAR HIS STAND ON LIQUOR ISSUE

Reaffirms Statement in His "Shannon Letter" Favoring Local Option.

By Associated Press. LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 18.—A letter from President Wilson has been made public here reaffirming his position on the liquor question and clarifying two previous letters on the same subject.

Known as the Shannon and Grogan letters, they were written when Mr. Wilson was Governor of New Jersey. The Shannon letter favored local option as a means of settling liquor issues. It stated if they were injected into State or national politics they brought disruption and rendered constructive legislation impossible. The Grogan letter has been construed in Kentucky to mean the writer favored statewide prohibition.

Text of the Two Letters. The Shannon letter was written in response to a letter from the Rev. Thomas B. Shannon, superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League in New Jersey. It is as follows:

I am in favor of local option. I am a thorough believer of local self-government and believe that every self-governing community which constitutes a social unit should have the right to control the matter of the regulation or withholding of licenses.

So far as I myself am concerned, therefore, I can never consent to have the question of local option made an issue between political parties in this State. My judgment is very clear in this matter.

The Grogan letter was written to E. W. Grogan of Byers, Tex., July 6, 1911, in the heat of the state-wide dry campaign there. It was published in Home and State, edited by the Rev. Dr. D. D. Rankin of Dallas, in the interest of the prohibition cause, and was also printed in several daily papers in Texas, and created a profound sensation. In the letter the then Gov. Wilson said:

I believe that for some states state-wide prohibition is possible and desirable because of their relative homogeneity, while for others I think that state-wide prohibition is not practicable. I have no reason to doubt, from what I know of the circumstances, that state-wide prohibition is both practicable and desirable in Texas.

Were Interpreted Differently. In view of the widely divergent interpretations placed upon the two letters, W. B. Haldeman, editor of the Louisville Times, wrote the resident as follows:

"Statewide prohibition has been made an issue by two of the candidates for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination in Kentucky, and in that connection the so-called Grogan letter is being used to imply that you approve of this principle in certain circumstances which are declared to fit the present Kentucky political situation. On the other hand the so-called Shannon letter is being used in an effort to prove that you stand for local self-government as a principle for Democrats to observe."

"If you feel that the situation warrants," Haldeman's letter said in conclusion, "I should be pleased to have a statement of present date from you as to your general attitude toward the questions presented by these letters. Such a statement would do much to clarify our local situation and do much to emphasize what you obviously intended by the Shannon letter."

The President's Reply. "I have your letter of May 5," the President's letter, made public today, says, "and must apologize for not having replied to it sooner. I am sure that you will understand the pressure of circumstances I have been under. The reply to your letter is very simple. My so-called Shannon letter precisely defines my position with regard to the liquor issue, not only as it was when I wrote the letter, but as it is now, and the letter to Mr. Grogan, is, or was, at any rate, intended to be entirely consistent with it. What I intended to say to Mr. Grogan and think that I said with sufficient clearness, was that, while the position I had taken in the Shannon letter expressed my fixed conviction in the matter, I was not self-confident or self-opinionated enough to say what the proper course of action was either in Texas or any other state where I was not personally in touch with the condition obtaining. I felt that it would be arrogant on my part to state that there were, in my opinion, no circumstances which justified an agitation for state-wide prohibition."

"I am sure that you yourself felt that there was no inconsistency between the two letters, and I am sincerely obliged to you for having afforded me the opportunity to make this very explicit."

Big Crows at the Stix, Baer & Fuller Dry Goods Sale. The Stix, Baer & Fuller Dry Goods Co., it was announced Wednesday, had done the largest business Tuesday that the firm has done any day since the holiday season. The occasion for this big business by the firm was the first day of the great sale of the Hargadine-McKittrick concern, part of which had been purchased by the Stix, Baer & Fuller department store and represents more than $1,000,000 in money. Because of the big purchase the Washington avenue store was enabled to obtain its stock at a big sacrifice.

Absorbs Skin, Chases Wrinkles—Young Again

"The shock at beholding myself in the glass after nine long weeks abed nearly caused a relapse," writes Emily Coleman in Home Queen. "The faded face, with its lines of illness and worry, seemed twenty years older. Now, I thought, I could not attend my chum's wedding, eleven days off, to which I had looked hopefully forward."

"She herself came to my rescue. She secured an ounce of ordinary mercantile wax at the drug store, which she bade me spread on like cold cream, washing it off next morning. Applied nightly, this apparently absorbed the wrinkles, skin so gently I experienced no discomfort. Upon the wedding morn the waxed complexion had entirely given way to one of youthful color and loveliness."

"And there wasn't a wrinkle. This due to a wash lotion made by dissolving a pinch of witch hazel in a half pint of water. The daily face bath had dispersed every line."—ADV.

ALEXANDER GRAHAM BELL HINTS WE MAY YET SEE BY ELECTRICITY

Investor of Telephone Makes Prophetic Speech in Accepting the Edison Medal.

NEW YORK, May 18.—Alexander Graham Bell, inventor of the telephone, in receiving the Edison medal for "marvellous achievement in electrical science," from the American Institute of Electrical Engineers, intimated that the day may yet come when we may see by electricity.

"There is more to come," he said, "you have electric light, heat, the telephone, the telegraph—are you going to stop? Are you going to see by electricity? I can imagine men with great coils of wire over their head, transmitting thoughts by induction."

John J. McCarthy, chief engineer of the American Telephone and Telegraph Co., in presenting the medal, said: "You gave to man the means of talking electrically. Yours was the first voice sent over a wire. Your name will be immortal as long as mankind benefits by your genius."

M'DOUGAL'S CREW ARE NAVAL HEROES, EVERY ONE OF 'EM

Stood Watch With Death on Destroyer Which They Thought Was Doomed.

By Licensed Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, May 18.—There are thousands of potential heroes in the Atlantic fleet which sailed from here yesterday, but the men of the destroyer McDougal have shown the stuff of which they are made. They have stood watch with death in the dark and angry sea and, with silent fortitude, awaited for hours the hand which they expected would sweep them into eternity.

A naval officer recently said: "It isn't that we have the best ships, the best guns and the best armor in all the world, but we do believe that we have the best men, and they are the ones who shall make our naval history."

What the men of the McDougal did is looked upon throughout the navy as a brilliant example of the courage and determination of the men of the service. There was nothing theatrical about it, and there was not one chance in a thousand that what they did would be further chronicled than in the grim official announcement that they had gone down with their vessel. In their hearts they felt that they were about to die, and they stood at their posts and waited.

Torpedo Expert in Command.

The McDougal is in command of Commander L. C. Palmer, a former St. Louisan, appointed to the Annapolis Naval Academy from Missouri in 1882, who is accounted one of the navy's torpedo experts. And he was in command of the men when they weathered eternity. That they are with him still is but one of the tokens of their willingness to serve under him through all hazards because the narrative of the McDougal's men has to do with the time they served with Palmer on the destroyer Aylwin, now at the Norfolk navy yard. She will go into commission next month, after a year in the hands of shipwrights.

The Aylwin, accompanied by other vessels of the destroyer flotilla, was coming up the coast from Guantanamo in April of last year. They were all bound for Norfolk and were running through a light and powerful sea at a speed of 20 knot—looming along, the bluejackets called it.

At 3:45 o'clock on the morning of April 6, when the flotilla was off Hatteras, the drum of the Aylwin's forward boiler blew out. The explosion tore a hole in her side from her upper deck to within a foot of her keel. In an instant every light aboard went out and the sea rushed into the great gash in her side.

Every Man to His Station.

Palmer was asleep upon a transom in the cabin, because the rolling of the destroyer made it impossible for him to keep in his berth. The explosion brought him to his feet at once, as it did practically all of the 94 men in the crew.

Every man aboard her went to his station as if it were a drill. They did not know what had happened beyond the fact that there was a hole in their vessel and that she was about to go down. Not a man spoke as he buckled his life preserver about him. It was "Stations all!" and every man at attention, waiting.

With electric flash lamps an inspection was made of the boiler compartment and there three men were found, as dead and dying in the water which had rushed in. Palmer, with a signal pistol, fired a message to the other destroyers that he was sinking, but they had heard the explosion and were standing by. The Cassin and the Cummings came to the Aylwin's quarter and offered to take the men of the Aylwin off, but every man Jack refused. They said they would remain with the vessel and her commander. They were told the Aylwin had been so injured that she could not remain afloat, but they still refused.

Injured Men Brought Up.

With the greatest difficulty the three injured men in the boiler room were brought up on deck. The greatest difficulty was encountered when it came to getting at Barney Glynn, the water tender. He stoutly refused to be moved until assured that the other two men in the boiler room had been lifted to the deck. Then his first plea was that not the word of what had happened should be told his sick wife in Norfolk because, he said, his death would be too great a shock for her to bear.

With the hole in her side and the sea beating over her the Aylwin sank lower and lower. It seemed that her final plunge would come with the very next wave. But the men stood firm at their posts, and not a soul spoke in answer to orders.

Why the Aylwin did not sink within five minutes after the explosion has always been a mystery to the Navy Department. But she gave her crew no indication that she did not go down came as a sort of answer to the question "How long?"

"So, until daylight, she labored in the heavy sea in utter darkness. When the light did come, the destroyer Parker got a line to her and the destroyer Benham ran alongside and took off the three injured men. Again was the offer made to take the crew off and again it was refused. Then began the Parker's long, slow journey to Norfolk, 125 miles away, with the shattered Aylwin dragging after. The Benham made a race of it for the sake of the injured, but they were hurt beyond recovery. Within a week all were dead."

What saved the Aylwin perhaps was her general good construction, just as faulty construction was said to have caused her accident, and immediately the four destroyers in her class were ordered to be reconstructed. The discipline the men showed on the Aylwin that early morning was as superb a thing as has ever been known.

That they had every faith in him is shown by the fact that, when the McDougal was placed in commission, the men of the Aylwin were told that they might go on her or further avoid the hazardous service on a destroyer, every man volunteered. And they are on her today.

CO-OPERATION OF NATIONS NEEDED FOR WORLD PEACE

John Bassett Moore Says Arbitration, Conciliation and Legislation Are Necessary.

By Associated Press.
MOHONK LAKE, N. Y., May 19.—John Bassett Moore, president of the Lake Mohonk Conference on International Arbitration, made "International Co-Operation" the subject of the address which he delivered at the conference today, and was given close attention, in view of the fact that, as former counsel of the Department of State, Moore has had much practical experience in handling matters of international concern.

Moore referred to the fact that the address which he delivered before the conference last year had been reported as having a pessimistic tone in regard to the value of present treaties of arbitration.

"Upon this interpretation," said Moore, "perhaps no comment is necessary beyond that which is furnished by the tragic events that have since occurred. These events inculcate the importance of facing candidly the realities of life and the grave problems which they involve. The tendency of the human mind, running in advance of results, to treat as an accomplished fact that which it desires to bring about, may often exert in the affairs of life a useful and helpful influence; but when, following the illusions of hope, it bids us close our eyes to actual conditions and to rely in comfortable security upon safeguards that either do not exist or are so defective as to be practically non-existent, it may become a peril as well as a hindrance to wise and essential effort."

Co-Operative Spirit Lacking.
Pointing out that, although a world court had been established at The Hague 16 years ago, the spirit of co-operation has been lacking to support it and make it effective, Moore discussed some of the necessary steps to secure international co-operation.

"At the present day," he said, "the world is groping about for something which will establish a reign of law among nations similar to that which exists within each individual state. It is evident that the first condition is the regulation of the conception of nationality. Exaggerated to the point where it either subordinates human rights to supposed national interests, or regards the interests of humanity as being capable of realization only through a particular national agency, there can be no doubt that this conception directly incites to the transgression of the bounds of law and justice."

"Nevertheless, when we come to analyze the conception of nationality, as expounded by the philosophers, we find its principal ingredients are largely imaginary."

The principle that every independent nation has the right to declare war and, having declared it, to assume the rights of conquest, Moore said, would have to be restricted before there was anything like a reign of law among nations.

International Police.
"Far more difficult than the statement of the object to be attained is the formulation and application of measures to carry it into effect. Here again it is of the first importance to grasp in its details the problem with which we are dealing. During the past 10 years we have, for instance, often been assured that what the world needs is an arbitration tribunal and an 'international police' to enforce its awards. This statement seems to disclose both a misconception of fact, and an incomplete grasp of conditions. The misconception of fact is the supposition that the evil from which the world today suffers is the disregard of arbitral awards. In reality, arbitral awards have been remarkably well observed. The actual problem with which the world is confronted is how to induce nations to accept not the results but the process of arbitration."

"The proposal for an 'international police' requires a more extended examination. The underlying idea of an international police appears to be that of a force to compel all states, without regard to their strength or weakness, to observe international law; and, when so extended, the proposal is at once seen to be closely connected with the question of the limitation, or of the development, as the case may be, of national armaments."

"How large a force, it may be asked, would have to be maintained in order effectually to hold in check any of the great Powers of Europe if their national armaments were continued on the scale of the past 25 years? It is manifest that it would have to be practically overwhelming unless it were merely to have the effect of the great armaments of Europe today in involving in hostilities a larger number of men and making armed conflict more bloody and more costly."

Can't Rely on Force Alone.
"The fact cannot be too often or too strongly stated that, for the preservation of order, national or international, we cannot rely upon force alone. Force is not an end; it is merely the means to an end. Situations often arise in which the resort to forcible measures tends to provoke conflict rather than to prevent it. Economic pressure may in many instances be far more efficacious than attempt at direct coercion; nor are proofs wanting that forbearance may sometimes be more effective than either, even leading to the eventual acceptance of wise solutions which were in the heat of controversy rejected. We must not forget that, back of all effort, moral or physical, lie the feelings, the sentiments, the aspirations of humanity; and it is only by the organization of forces, moral and physical, in such manner as to assure justice and contentment through co-operation, that widespread outbreaks of violence can be avoided."

"In order to attain this end, it would be necessary to provide for the employment of three different kinds of agencies, which may be designated by the titles arbitration, conciliation, legislation.

Judicial Process.
"Arbitration represents the judicial process. As defined in The Hague Convention for the Pacific Settlement of International Disputes, 'International arbitration has for its object the settlement of differences between states by judges of their own choice, on the basis of respect for law.' With the object of facilitating the immediate recourse to this process, the convention provided for the establishment of a 'permanent court of arbitration, accessible at all times,' and proceeding in accordance with definite rules, for the establishment of another or additional tribunal differently constituted."

"The fact is generally admitted that for the preservation of peace and order, judicial methods will not alone suffice. Even though it be demonstrable that international arbitration may be carried, because it has been carried, far beyond the limits set in some of our general treaties of arbitration, it is, nevertheless, true that a judicial process is not adequate to all the needs of international life. It often happens that differences can be effectually adjusted only by the removal of their causes, and this may require the exercise of a power and discretion beyond the application of existing rules. The exercise of such a power would properly be vested in a tribunal of conciliation."

No Nation Above the Law.
"In the formation of an international organization, provision for the definition and improvement of the rules of international intercourse would form an important and essential part. A step in this direction was taken in the peace conference at The Hague, but it fell far short of what is necessary to make the legislative process effective. This is particularly the case in respect of the power to enact rules of law. In The Hague conferences unanimity was necessary to the establishment of a rule binding on all the Powers; and even in the treaties relating to the conduct of war, it was provided that they should not be obligatory unless all the parties to the particular conflict had ratified them. It is probably true that, if there were allowed to each independent state, as has heretofore been done, a single vote, a mere majority rule would be quite unacceptable."

"While I am not so much disturbed as many persons seem to be by the

QUICK RELIEF FROM CONSTIPATION

Get Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets.

That is the joyful cry of thousands since Dr. Edwards produced Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel.

Dr. Edwards, a practicing physician for 17 years, and calomel's old-time enemy, discovered the formula for Olive Tablets, while treating patients for chronic constipation and torpid livers.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets do not contain calomel, but a healing, soothing vegetable laxative.

No griping is the "key-note" of these little sugar-coated, olive-colored tablets. They cause the bowels and liver to act normally.

If you have a "dark brown mouth" now and then—a bad breath—a dull, tired feeling—sick headache—torpid liver and are constipated, you'll find quick, sure and only pleasant results from one or two little Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets at bedtime.

Thousands take one or two every night just to keep right. Try them. 15c and 50c per box. All druggists.

The Olive Tablet Company, Columbus, O.

apprehension that small states would not be found systematically to unite against larger states, yet the rule of a mere numerical majority of nations would necessarily meet with strong opposition. The requirement of unanimity must, however, be done away with before an international lawmaking Power can be effectually established, and there, should be no difficulty in abolishing it, when the principle, so essential to international organization, is once accepted, that no nation is so high or so powerful as to be above the law."

Dr. John Grier Hibben, president of Princeton University, stirred the conference by taking issue with pacifists who favor disarmament and by advocating a wise preparedness of our military forces in the United States.

"I do not advocate preparedness for war," he said, "but a preparedness against war—a preparedness which in the event of the catastrophe of war itself will prevent the enormous initial sacrifice of human lives which has characterized every war in which the United States has been engaged throughout our history."

"I am not in sympathy with the peace propaganda which is being prosecuted in many of our schools, so far, at least, as it endeavors to quicken the peace sentiment by impressing on the minds of the young children the horrors or the economical losses of war."

Never in the 21 years of its existence had the Lake Mohonk conference heard such a call to arms.

Locomotive Sparks Cause Fire.
Sparks from a locomotive set fire to two vacant frame dwellings at 618 and 616 Amanda avenue, about 4 o'clock this morning. The damage was estimated at $750. The property is owned by John Dell, president of the Missouri Fire Brick Co.

She Followed Friend's Advice

After trying Fruitola and Traxo, Mrs. L. C. Clark, 840 Mehta St., Dallas, Texas, wrote to the Plinus Laboratories as follows:

"I have been a sufferer from gall-stones, and Fruitola and Traxo were recommended and I am glad to say I took advantage of your most wonderful medicine, with wonderful results."

Fruitola and Traxo are two remedies that are used in combination. Fruitola acts on the intestinal organs as a powerful lubricant, to the great relief of the patient. Traxo is a compound of splendid tonic properties, of special value in strengthening and restoring the system that has been weakened by constant suffering.

The Plinus laboratories have many letters on file testifying to the merit of Fruitola and Traxo; letters from people who have used the remedy and know from actual experience what it has done for them. For the convenience of the public, arrangements have been made to supply Fruitola and Traxo through leading drug stores. A booklet of special interest to those who suffer from stomach trouble can be obtained without expense by writing to the Plinus Co., Monticello, Ill.

DESIRE FOR JOBS BEHIND PARKWAY FIGHT, KIEL SAYS

Politicians Oppose Project Because They Can't Get Places, Mayor Asserts.

Mayor Kiel today learned that at a meeting of the Republican City Committee last night an effort to have the parkway project endorsed by the committee was unsuccessful and that the discussion showed a majority of the committeemen to be opposed to the parkway.

In reference to the committee's hostility to the project Mayor Kiel today told a Post-Dispatch reporter that he believed most of the committeemen had taken that stand because of hostility to him and to his administration because they had been unable to get the patronage they wanted.

"Can't Get Jobs for the Boys."

"They are sore because they can't get jobs for the boys," said the Mayor. "Under the new charter I can't give jobs to them. Therefore they are fighting me and the Efficiency Board and are trying to embarrass me by opposing the parkway."

"Is St. Louis going to let a lot of politicians run the town because they can't get jobs? I expect the people to rally and defeat these politicians."

"Of course, jobs would help keep the boys in good humor, but the committeemen ought to be big enough not to make their fight on me at a time when an important issue like the parkway is to be decided."

Should Wait for Issue.

"Why don't they wait until they think they have something on me and then make the fight on that issue?"

"I believe that by the time of the parkway election, June 8, at least 10 or 12 committeemen will be for the parkway."

It was learned that at last night's meeting an effort was made by Committeeman Frank M. Slater to induce the committee to put itself on record as favoring the parkway. The opposition was led by Committeeman Theodore Umbright of the Third Ward.

Some of Mayor Kiel's friends in the committee did not attend the meeting. Building Commissioner McKelvey and Supply Commissioner Thomas, parkway and administration adherents were absent.

State Senator Peter Anderson, who is unfriendly to the Mayor, also was absent. Anderson today told a Post-Dispatch reporter he believed the committee would not endorse the parkway project, but would not make an active fight against it.

KIEL IS BEST MAYOR CITY EVER HAD, MRS. KIEL SAYS

He Also Is a Good Husband, Father, Grandfather and Father-in-Law, She Asserts.

One person in St. Louis believes that Mayor Kiel is the best Mayor the city ever had. She is Mrs. Kiel, and she said so yesterday when she spoke at a luncheon of the Eighth District of the State Federation of Women's Clubs at the Midland Valley Country Club.

Someone had quoted her as saying that the Mayor was a model husband. When a Post-Dispatch reporter asked her about that she spiritedly replied that it was not a discussion about husbands, but about women and public affairs.

"What I did say," she explained, "was that my husband is the best Mayor that ever sat in the chair in St. Louis. He was the first Mayor to give women a voice in public matters and to open up the city hall to them."

She was asked if she meant by this to deny that the Mayor is a model husband. "Certainly not!" she exclaimed with a laugh. "He is a good husband and a good father and a good grandfather and a good father-in-law. He is a good Mayor, too, and I don't see how anybody could deny it."

VOTES 'HOME RULE' FOR LIQUOR

Denver Adopts City Law to Open Way to Avoid State Prohibition.

DENVER, Colo., May 19.—An amendment to the city charter providing for "home rule" regarding liquor regulation carried by a comfortable majority at the general municipal elections here yesterday. The single tax amendment was defeated overwhelmingly.

The "home rule" amendment is intended to give the city the right to determine by recourse to the courts whether Denver, operating under a special charter, can regulate its own liquor traffic. In spite of the passage at the recent State election of State-wide prohibition.

SOLODAN FAZORE IN ANNUAL HIGH SCHOOL EVENTS

Track and Field Meet Is Scheduled to Be Held at Francis Field, May 27.

CLASS IS MISSING

Only Fair Marks Have Been Made in Meets at Different Schools This Year.

With the annual interscholastic track and field meet at a week and a half distant, coaches of the local high schools, are making their final selections for the yearly outdoor "prep" classic. The meet will be held on May 27, at Francis Field. It had been planned to stage the games at the new Scholastic Field, but sufficient time to build the track was lacking.

Judging from the marks set in the early season dual meets and school field days, the high school crop of track performers seems to be quite lacking—that is in merit. With but few exceptions, in the case of one or two individual stars, the marks have been mediocre. However, this has often proven the case in early spring, while the athletes came back with good records, in the big meet.

In the race events, the senior division, Solodan seems to have an edge on his rivals. McKelney, Solodan has a well balanced team, and the official squad which was yesterday chosen by Coach Collins, is the favorite for this year's meet. McKelney has a strong track team, but the field events seem to have been overlooked. Central has several men who look like place winners, but second and third place performers are needed to gain the necessary points.

Taking the sprints, Solodan and McKelney should have a lively battle for honors in the 100 and 200 yard dashes. The West Enders usually have an edge with such a quartet of short distance runners as Scholts, Hayes, Linton and Thompson. Leary and La Mont are the favorites for McKelney, while Abbott of Central should be heard from. Cox and Wrightman are the Yeatman nominees for the two sprints.

Quarter Milers Lack Class.

The quarter milers this year lack the usual class. Davidson of Solodan, Osborne of Central, Woods of Yeatman and La Mont of McKelney will all have difficulty in keeping the time under one minute. Osborne is said to have run the distance in 57 seconds on one occasion.

The distance, judging from early marks are also woefully provincial. Bredehoff of Solodan seems to be the class and with his partner Lowy should bring several points to his school. Central and Hayes will probably represent Central. Crank, Woods and Riese will perform for Yeatman and Schuster and Reed for McKelney. The best mile mark credited to date is 3m. 36s. by Bredehoff, who beat 30 time in 3m. 36s. by Schuster of McKelney.

Although the "distance" are below the usual standard in some events, this year's hurdlers should set some new marks, inasmuch as there are a number of likely leaders. Toole of Central, with a 16-1-3e, seems to be the class of the high school hurdlers. Lindholm and of Solodan and Kammerer of McKelney are touted to struggle for the low hurdle victory. Johnson, Nagle and Hagie will assist Lindholm in the obstacle runs for Solodan. Lefty and Leary will act as second and third men for McKelney, while Sims and Wrightman will perform for Yeatman.

Toole Best in High Jump.

The high jump again brings into prominence Toole of Central, who owns a mark of 68 in. He is closely pressed by Cox of Yeatman and Thompson of Solodan, who have hoped over the bar at 64 ft. Kinsey is the main reliance of McKelney.

Hauer of Central, Cox of Yeatman, Kinsey of McKelney and Scholts and Johnson of Solodan are the real contenders for the running broad jump. All have marks around 20 ft. and the event should be closely contested, with Hauer the favorite.

"Long" Metastetter of Central, P. J. Johnson of Solodan, McKelney, Cox and Johnson of Solodan are picked to stage in a hard struggle for the pole vault, each being limited to about the 10-foot mark.

Hauer and Pothoff of Central, McKelney and Belmdick of Solodan, Cox of Yeatman and Mohr of McKelney are the entrants in the weight events. Hauer and McKelney are in line for first honors in the shot, each having put them in 35 ft. and 36 ft. respectively. Leary of Yeatman, with his 110-foot mark, is far ahead in the discus.

As to the junior events, it is quite a hazardous undertaking to predict a winner.

Trendall Has Not Gone Back, Victory Over Pierson Shows St. Louis Welter Fast and Clever

Conceding Weight to Kansas Cityan, the "Pride of the Patch" Outpoints and Outfights His Opponent in Future City A. C. Feature—Paddy Kelly "Comes Back."

By Harry S. Sharpe.

Before for Future City A. C. and the Post-Dispatch's Boxing Authority. ARRY TRENDALL of St. Louis was awarded the verdict over Charles Pierson of Kansas City last night at the Future City Athletic Club, after a trial lasting eight rounds, and it is probable there was no dissenting opinion. Pierson took no appeal from the decision, and conceded that the contest had been won by Trendall strictly upon merit.

Trendall had been charged with "going back," and his acquittal came as a pleasing result to his many friends. Having for so long occupied the position of "local lightweight champion," it was, of course, expected that Trendall would make a great effort to retain his well-earned prestige.

And he did—before proceeding with the contest he formally waived all claims to his former title by stepping into the arena weighing about 140 pounds and qualifying for the welterweight division. Having made this clear, he announced himself as ready, and informed a friend close by that he was "confident of winning."

KENNEY WILL NOT REPRESENT GLEN ECHO IN TOURNEY

Former Local Champion May Not Even Enter State Golf Event, This Month.

Glen Echo's golf links, over which the coming State championships will be played, has been the busiest course in town for the past two weeks, being patronized by many non-members, whose home links are slower to develop each spring. As usual the Glen Echo course is almost perfect.

R. W. Fullerton, former club champion, has lately returned to the game, after announcing during the winter that he had given up golf. Fullerton is playing unusually well, according to Professional Bill Duffy, and should be one of the mainstays of Glen Echo in the coming tournament.

Kenney, who formerly of Glen Echo, will not represent that club this season, and may not enter the State tourney. Arthur Kenney also says he is in doubt about playing, although he will be numbered among the entrants. All the other first flight players are sure to compete.

Municipal Tourney Sunday.

The first annual tournament of the Municipal Golf League will be started next Sunday according to an announcement made yesterday afternoon by the Park Department. Municipal tournaments have been staged for the past two years, but this is the first to be held under the auspices of the league.

An entry fee of 50 cents will be charged for each player, and a prize of $100 will be offered for the winner. Entries can be made with J. W. Himmelbach, secretary, 1517 North Broadway.

It was also announced that $353 golf permits had been issued by the Park Department this season. At least 300 of this number is expected to be used in the tournament.

A tennis tournament also will be arranged as soon as the tennis equipment is organized by the Municipal Athletic Association.

Browns Idle, but Quit the Cellar

Sometimes it helps a club to draw an enforced lay-off on account of weather conditions. This was the case with the Browns yesterday and the result was that Rickey's aggregation hopped into seventh place, while the Athletics were losing to the White Sox.

Rickey, who at present is shy on pitchers, Carl Weiland and Grover Lowdermilk are the only moundmen, who are in condition to go the full route at present.

2 Local Games Are Called Off

Cold weather was the reason advanced for the cancellation of both local ball games today. The Browns-Nationals game, which was scheduled for 2 o'clock, and the Cardinals-Pirates game, which was scheduled for 7:30, both were called off.

Frankie Callahan Boxes Benny Leonard 7 Rounds With Right Hand Broken

A telegram to the Post-Dispatch received this morning from "Sport" Sullivan, dated Brooklyn, stated that Frankie Callahan, the Brooklyn lightweight who won so many friends here last winter by his clever and game boxing, had broken his right hand in the first round of a bout with Benny Leonard at Brooklyn last night, but had stuck through the eight rounds for which the bout was scheduled. Leonard was given the decision.

MORIN PLAYS MAUPOME.

Charles Morin of Chicago and Pedro Maupome of Philadelphia are scheduled to play the opening match in the inter-city three-cushion tournament, which will be started tonight at Peterson's. Matches also will be played at the Rex, Charles Ellis, the Inter-city champion, Clabby and Chip from taking part in this State for a month.

Ex-Card Pitcher Stars.

SPORT SALAD BY L.C. DAVIS

It's a Long Way.

A CERTAIN baseball manager was sitting in his chair, and ever and anon he ran his fingers through his hair. His brow was corrugated, for his troubles pressed him sore. This and refrain came floating through the keyhole in the door:

It's a long way to first division. It's a long way to go. It's a long way to first division. It's a long way to go. It's a long way to first division. It's a long way to go.

The Cards Move.

THE Cardinals, we're pleased to note, have left the lower regions; Christian Kenney is occupied with the Cardinals, and his legions. By "Muggs" and his legions. It gives us joy to see the Cards awaken from their slumber. They put the bee on Demaree. And got the "Phillies" number.

Fashion Notes.

On account of the extreme chilly weather the ladies have laid aside those nifty neck furs for the time being and will continue to wear those gauzy low cut shawl waists until the weather turns warm enough to make the wearing of furs feasible.

"Lumbago" Bill Doak gave the Philadelphia wall-papers the green eye, yesterday.

Not Water Buffalo.

LARRY SCHLAFLY of the Buffalo Bulls has as good a club as there is in the league, but the Bulls have been unable to win a game since they were defeated by the Cardinals in their last game. Fledler Jones says he has his eye on first division right now. Good eye, old top, now get your grip on it!

Judging by the brand of weather we've been getting this spring it looks like the magnates had overlooked the Cardinals when handing out the annual passes.

We've got to give it to him for one thing though. He gave us ideal weather for opening day in the Straw Hat League last Sunday. Thanks.

Clarke Griffith says he can't "see" the Cardinals with a telescope. Things have changed since he was a kid, when the Old Fox couldn't see anything else.

Griff further states that there are no baseball brains in the Cardinals. He says that the Cardinals are a team of "bush" and "rubber" so the Cardinals should be called "bush and rubber."

At that it doesn't take such a smart fellow to run a pennant contender into fourth place.

Speaking about pennant contenders did you notice that those Cards jumped from the cellar to sixth place in one jump. That's what's called being called going up by leaps and bounds.

Yesterday was moving day in St. Louis. The Cards and Browns both left the cellar, the former going two stories higher and the latter one. It wasn't a good day for moving, either, but when our boys get started it takes something more than a little rain and frost to stop 'em.

Y. M. C. A. TANK TEAM DEFEATS ST. CHARLES

ROBINSON'S ARM BILLED FOR TRIAL AGAINST QUAKERS

Huggins' Expects to Use Southpaw in Today's Getaway Game at Philadelphia.

Special to the Post-Dispatch. PHILADELPHIA, Pa., May 18.—The St. Louis Cardinals will wind up their first series of the season here, this afternoon, when the indications are that Hank Robinson will try his southpaw against the Quakers. Huggins, who has pitched only one game in more than a week, is likely to go to the mound for the National League leaders.

The Cardinals will leave for New York immediately after the game, and will be quartered in that city for a week.

Bill Dook's splitter was working yesterday, and that's enough explanation of the Cardinals' victory, score 5 to 2. He held the hard-hitting Quakers to four safeties and was supported by errorless ball and some good hitting, of which Jack Miller, Beck and Butler were the chief providers, each making two safeties.

Before the series with St. Louis started, the Cardinals had great admiration for Snyder's throwing ability. They were sure that he was a "bullet" pitcher, and that he would be a "bullet" pitcher.

WRAY'S COLUMN

Dillon Fighter vs. Dillon Lawyer.

THE longest fight on record is not that of Harry Sharpe vs. Frank Crooby, as popularly supposed. The real marathon of the ring world is still undecided, it having been "continued" from time to time for the past seven or eight months without settlement.

This battle between Jack Dillon, fighter, and Paul Dillon, lawyer, with the prize $750, now drawing interest in a bank, pending settlement of the argument.

Originally this fight started one October evening last year, and was begun by Dillon and Knockout Brown. After three limburger rounds, which offended the nostrils of ring-side spectators and that it was stopped. Paul Dillon, attorney for Kayo Brown, handed Dillon a hard blow to the pocketbook by attaching the Indianapolis' guarantee, stating that he had not earned it.

And the Finish—

SINCE that time Lawyer Dillon has successfully defended said 75 iron men against all assaults by Jack Dillon. After a long breathing spell it is said the last round will be started next July, nine months after the battle was begun.

The outcome? There seems to be no "form" on this fight; but both men are on the conservative Yost tactics, a few seasons ago, is now more on the map than at any other school, seemingly. At least Yost is establishing a system tending to make his men thoroughly familiar with handling long through.

This system consists of playing baseball with a college football, forcing men to make long and accurate throws across the diamond, as well as accustoming them to handling the awkwardly shaped spheroid sure.

The difference between regular baseball and football is that no catcher is required. The man up instead of swinging a bat, advances to the plate, receives the pitcher's pass and then hurls the ball as far as he can in any direction he thinks will be out of reach of all fielders. Then he likes for first. The play on him is made just as if the sphere had been batted.

It surely ought to develop facility in handling the old pigskin.

No Formaldehyde Needed.

TONIGHT, at New York, a wrestling tournament will be begun at which ring-side spectators will not be forced to wear patent clothespins on their nostrils. Alex Abeg of Reval, Bethania, said to be the strongest wrestler in the world, and many times a Graciano Roman champion in Europe, will go on in the first of a series of matches against all-comers, in which he undoubtedly will score a victory for each fall.

In this tournament Wladek Zbyzsko, Abeg is now over 40 years of age, but is still in his wrestling prime, reports state.

ENEMIES BLAME CHURCHILL FOR STRAITS LOSSES

Critics of First Lord Say He Was Too Hasty in Dardanelles Operations.

CALLED A POLITICIAN

Movements Against Advice of Sea Lords.

LONDON, May 18.—The Dardanelles expedition has been made the occasion for another strong attack upon Mr. Churchill by his persistent enemies, who seem now about to achieve a reorganization of the Cabinet in this way. Briefly told, the charge against him is this: The question of forcing the Dardanelles and taking Constantinople having been mentioned in a Cabinet conference, it is said that Mr. Churchill, consulting nobody else, went to the head of the Intelligence Department of the Admiralty and asked him if he thought the scheme possible. The reply was that it was quite possible when the Queen Elizabeth and other heavy ships should be available, but that the work of the fleet would have to be supported by a land force.

The story then goes that Mr. Churchill simply told his colleagues that the Intelligence Department of the Admiralty considered the scheme perfectly feasible, but said nothing to them of the necessity for a supporting land force.

With the memory of the First Lord's great work in having the grand fleet mobilized before the outbreak of the war, it is said that the Cabinet once more gave him a free hand and that Mr. Churchill immediately proceeded to order an unassisted fleet operation against the Dardanelles. This, it is said, he did against most urgent requests of Lord Fisher and also of Lord Kitchener.

The further charge is made against Churchill that when the fleet operations began to appear slow he ordered the Admiral to make haste matters, with the result that three battleships were sacrificed. It may be said that Churchill as First Lord of the Admiralty, assuming that he acted in the way described, did so within his technical rights, but contrary to general usage.

As will be easily understood, it is impossible to vouch for the accuracy of the foregoing; but it is an accurate statement of the charges made against Churchill by those who are anxious to see him deposed from the post of First Lord.

As at the time of the Antwerp expedition, the attack upon him is led by the Morning Post, which returns to its argument "that the man at the wheel in this war is the soldier and sailor, and for politicians to interfere in the conduct of naval and military operations is altogether wrong and may easily be disastrous."

Morning Post Renewed Attack.
In slightly more veiled terms, the Morning Post, in its editorial, put forward the charge against Churchill practically as stated above. This was the morning after Lord Charles Bessborough, the Prime Minister in the House of Commons a series of questions implying that the First Lord had ordered the fleet to attempt the forcing of the Dardanelles, not only entirely upon his own responsibility but in direct opposition to the professional advice of the four Sea Lords.

Neither the accusation of Lord Charles Bessborough nor that of the Morning Post has received any contradiction. The supporters of Churchill, whose views are well expressed by the Westminster Gazette, argue that "perhaps the accusation has not been contradicted because it seems to bear on the face of it evidence of its own inaccuracy."

The Morning Post, returning to the charge, declares that their statement has not been denied because it is true. It repeats the charge that Churchill "is habitually overriding the experts in the direction of the naval campaign," and goes on: "We asserted that he had done so at Antwerp and, as the Government is well aware, we had substantial proof on which to found our assertion. We assert again that the naval attack on the Dardanelles was against the opinion of Lord Fisher."

ROBBED OF HIS MONEY BELT

Two Men Armed With Revolvers Get
$21 at Western End of Case Line.

While the crew of a Cass car was leaving a restroom at the western terminus of the line, Belt and St. Louis avenues, shortly after 11 o'clock this morning, two armed robbers stopped them.

Harry Mitchell, the conductor, living at 4137 Lexington avenue, was backed against the side of a coke shed and ordered to hold up his hands while the robber cut the belt of his money changer. The robber then turned to the motorman and asked for his money. The motorman was John Kennedy of 2807 North Prairie avenue. He was powerless to help his companion, as he, too, was covered with a revolver.

WILLIAM J. LEMP, BREWER, MARRIES MRS. ELLIE LIMBERG

Ceremony Performed at Home of Bride's Son—Only Nearest Relatives Present.

WEDDING NOT ANNOUNCED

It Was Outcome of 6 Years' Courtship; Bridegroom Was Divorced in 1909.

The marriage of Mrs. Ellie Koehler Limberg, daughter of Mrs. Caspar Koehler of 4651 Lindell boulevard, and William J. Lemp, which took place yesterday afternoon, is the outcome of almost a lifelong friendship and a six years' courtship.

Since the summer of 1909 or 1910, when Mr. Lemp traveled in Europe with Mrs. Koehler's party, which included her daughters, Mrs. Ottilie Krausnick, Mrs. Limberg and her son, Edward A. Limberg, rumor has set the date of the marriage many times. So constantly have they been seen together that the engagement was generally understood.

The ceremony was performed at 5 o'clock at the home of the bride's son, who married Miss Virginia Foster last autumn. The Rev. John W. Day of the Church of the Messiah officiated and only the nearest relatives were present.

The bride is the widow of Rudolph Limberg, who was associated with the Columbia Brewing Co., of which the late Caspar Koehler was president. The latter died while traveling in Europe for his health, about ten years ago. Mrs. Lemp is considered very attractive and is so youthful in appearance and manner that she looks more like her son's sister than his mother. She is one of a group of fashionable women who have interested themselves in the St. Louis Maternity Hospital, and it is said that much of the credit for the success of the recent fashion show was due to her untiring efforts.

Mr. Lemp recently completed a large home on the Gravois road, St. Louis County, where he and his bride will reside when they return from their wedding trip.

Mr. Lemp is the president of the Lemp Brewing Co. and the brother of Charles A. and Edwin A. Lemp and Mrs. Thomas Wright, who was Miss Ellie Lemp. He married Miss Lillian Handlan, daughter of A. H. Handlan, in 1899, and in 1909 she obtained a divorce after several years of separation. There was one child, William J. Lemp Jr., who was WOMAN SUFFRAGE It's War Time Aspect.

The women of England are doing their duty. They are taking care of the wounded, or if they cannot assist in work of that kind they are adding their savings to promote the good work. They are knitting and sewing for the soldiers at the front. The suffragists have given so little trouble to the government that it will undoubtedly soften the hearts of those in Parliament, since the "militants" have turned all their energies to aid the fighting men of England, and so suffrage may soon come after this terrible war is over.

Thousands of women in America have overcome their sufferings, and have been cured of womanly ills by Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. This medicine, though started nearly half a century ago, sells more widely today than any other womanly tonic. It can now be had in tablet form as well as liquid, and every woman who suffers from backache, headache, nervousness, pain at times, should take this "Prescription" of Dr. Pierce.

Many a woman is nervous and irritable, feels dragged down and worn out for no reason that she can think of. In ninety-nine per cent of these cases it is the womanly organism which requires attention; the weak back, many spells and black circles about the eyes are only symptoms. Go to the source of trouble and correct the irregularities, the drains on the womanly system and the other symptoms disappear.

Doctor Pierce's Tablets are unequalled as a Liver Pill. Smallest, easiest to take. One tiny, sugar-coated "Tablet" does. Cures Sick Headache, Bilious Headache, Dizziness, Constipation, Indigestion, Bilious Attacks, and all derangements of the liver, stomach and bowels. 25 cents vial, by druggists. —ADV.

awarded to his mother, with the provision that he was to spend certain portions of the time with his father.

Mrs. Walter Sanford Chapin and her infant son will depart shortly for Narragansett Pier, where Mrs. Chapin has a cottage. She will be accompanied by her mother, Mrs. George C. Dyer of 6339 Washington boulevard.

The marriage of Miss Lola Rothschild, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Rothschild of 4715 Washington boulevard and Kirk Madison Roberts was celebrated this morning at the home of the bride. The ceremony took place at 11 o'clock, the Rev. William C. Bittling of the Second Baptist Church officiating. The bride wore a gown of white crepe material made in empire style, with the bodice of point lace. The court train, which fell from the high waist line, was of brocade satin. Her veil was of tulle arranged with a coronet of lilies of the valley and she carried a bouquet of bride's roses and lilies of the valley.

Miss Adele Hartman was the only bridesmaid. She wore a frock of pale green tulle silk, a large picture hat of green tulle and carried pink roses. The bride's brother, Charles M. Rothschild, served Mr. Roberts as best man. After the ceremony there was a bridal breakfast for the nearest relatives, who were present at the wedding. At noon Mr. Roberts and his bride departed upon their honeymoon tour. When they return they will be at home at 4564 Washington boulevard.

Misses Stella and Thelma McNulty, daughters of Mrs. Mary McNulty of 8108 Easton avenue, departed yesterday for San Francisco to visit the fair. They will be gone two months.

Miss Ruth Bixby's marriage this evening to Ir. A. Stevens, formerly of Boston, which will take place at the Bixby residence on Lindell boulevard and King's highway at 6 o'clock, will be one of the notable nuptial events of the spring.

The bride, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William K. Bixby, made her debut last autumn and has been one of the belles of the past season. The wedding will be small because Mr. Bixby's mother, Mrs. E. L. Bixby, who is more than 90 years old, has been in ill health. There will be but one bridesmaid, Miss Edith Whittemore, as all the arrangements are quite simple and only the nearest relatives and friends have been invited. Edward G. Hotchkiss will be best man.

After their wedding trip Mr. Stevens and his bride will reside in the Tudor Apartments.

WOMAN DEAD IN ROOM; HUSBAND'S BODY IN WATER

Wife Had Been Shot While Man Had Killed Self on Edge of Pier.

CAMBRIDGE, Md., May 19.—Mrs. Jennie Beckwith was found dead in her room yesterday with a bullet wound in her head. Her husband was missing and a little later his empty automobile was found at the foot of the pier. The water there was dragged and in a short while his body was brought to the surface.

There was also a bullet hole through his head, showing that he was standing at the water's edge when he fired the shot and fell over into the water.

A colored man who cooked for the couple testified that he had heard an altercation in the couple's room, but he paid no attention to it until the failure of either to appear at breakfast made him suspect something serious. Mrs. Beckwith was badly bruised and her own pistol had one chamber empty. A bullet hole in a picture apparently showed that she had fired a shot. Beckwith's brother, Samuel C. Beckwith, lives in New York, where he has an advertising agency.

Torpedo Boat Destroyer Tried. PHILADELPHIA, May 19.—The torpedo boat destroyer Ericsson, which returned yesterday from a trial trip off the Delaware Capes, made an official standard record of 30.41 knots an hour. Her contract calls for a speed of 29 knots.

CIRCUIT ATTORNEY DISCUSSES CAUSE OF GIACONI VERDICT

He Says Jury Must Have Been Affected by Viciousness Revealed in Case.

The surprising result to the police of the murder trial of Giovanni Giaconi, who was condemned to death Monday night by a jury for killing his benefactress, Mrs. Teresa Cratto, 1310 Hickory street, is attributed by Circuit Attorney Harvey to the extreme heartlessness of the crime. Since the State Legislature empowered juries to decide whether the punishment for first-degree murder shall be hanging or imprisonment, the capital punishment law has been virtually a dead letter in St. Louis.

In only one other recent case has the extreme penalty been ordered—that of a negro, Jack Franklin—and a new trial has been granted him. There has been an average of one trial a week in the last few years in which some degree of murder or manslaughter is charged, but no person has been hanged here since 1907 and no white person has been hanged since the death sentence was executed upon Henry J. Heusack, Aug. 21, 1905.

"This was an aggravated case," said Circuit Attorney Harvey, "and there was everything to indicate natural viciousness. Mrs. Cratto was a poor widow with seven children, whom she tried to support by keeping boarders. Giaconi had lived in her house for several months and had fallen behind in his pay. Poor as she was, the widow carried him as long as she could and then told him he would have to go elsewhere. "His actions seemed to show careful premeditation of what followed. He left the house as ordered, but he armed himself with a revolver and crept back. Mrs. Cratto, with some of her children, was kneeling at a chair, rosary in hand, praying. Without a word of reproach or warning, Giaconi shot her in the back. The picture of this woman on her knees, must have had a strong effect upon the minds of the jurors." Circuit Attorney Harvey explained that, because of the disposition of the average jury not to send a defendant to the gallows, it is not customary for members of his staff to ask the death penalty in final arguments on murder cases, unless the evidence has shown unusual viciousness or the accused is a habitual criminal considered dangerous to be at large.

In six recent cases the request for a death sentence has been disregarded and life imprisonment fixed. These are the cases of George Singer and Carl Caldwell for the murder of Fred H. Zoller; Ed Murray and Fred Moeller, for the murder of Stephen Lukos; John Strickott and Fred Tracy, for the murder of Patrolman Splicker.

In the Nick of Time

The story of a man saved from the electric chair because there wasn't any electricity to execute him with.

By Mildred Caroline Goodridge.

"TWO hours longer—oh, how can I endure this fearful ordeal! The cup of sorrow was filled to overflowing for the speaker—a young woman fair as a wild spring flower, but as one crushed and dying in a fierce, wintry blast.

She was Alice Lloyd. By her side in a cradle slept her child, a cherub-faced infant scarcely six months old. Opposite her sat a man whose sinewy frame and bronzed face suggested a person of coarser mold, but his eyes redeemed the presentment. His intense gaze, flickering in their depths showed a sterling soul of sympathy and rare human interest behind the mask of grimness.

His lips set as though in the case of this woman he faced an ordeal that could not be evaded. He glanced at the clock. A spasm of frightful mental torment appeared to almost crush him. His face grew deadly white.

"I would give my life 100 times over to save your husband," spoke Richard Doyle, huskily.

"Dear friend," answered the woman, brokenly, "do I not know it? How you have stood by us in all this terrible trouble!"

"Your husband, John Lloyd, and myself are like brothers. He saved my life once. Oh, that I could aid him! Oh, that I could lessen your burden!"

One-two-three-four-five-six—seven—eight-nine-ten! the counting, worn-out clock rapidly tolled out the hour. The woman shivered and her hair fell over her outspread arms as she burst into a torrent of tears.

Doomed to Die. RICHARD DOYLE, her husband's sturdy friend and her own, whose weekly payments alone saved Mrs. Lloyd and her little child from starvation, clenched his great heavy hands in mute anguish, while the cold drops of perspiration stood out upon his brow as if forced there through the internal agony he could not subdue.

Two hours—he shuddered. At the hour of midnight, less than two miles distant at the State penitentiary, John Lloyd, husband and friend, was due to be electrocuted for the crime of murder.

In another part of the State, a superintendent of a factory of which the young man was bookkeeper, had been shot dead from ambush one dark night. The victim and Lloyd had quarreled. There had been blood between them. The weapon found near the scene of the crime had belonged to Lloyd. The latter stated it had been stolen from his house the evening previous. His lawyer cited many enemies of the dead man. In vain!

The suspected man was tried, found guilty and sentenced to the extreme penalty.

His wife, his little child and his best friend, Doyle, removed to the little town to be near their loved one during his last days. Doyle secured work in the great electric plant. Once a week they allowed Alice to see her doomed husband. That afternoon she had taken her last farewell of him. Now she was counting the slow, agonizing minutes—so fatally slow—ere the act of electrocution was due.

Suddenly there was a low moan of pain from a little room off the kitchen. Both Doyle and the woman started up, the latter with a lamp, and hurried to the source of the outcry.

Guided by Heaven. UPON a bed lay a man, thin, leaden-eyed, gasping for breath. It spoke well for the rare humanity of the town that the evening before, when they found this poor wreck in a dead faint at the doorsteps, they had taken him in and cared for him.

"Where am I?" he now asked. "I was seeking the friends, the home of Johnny Lloyd."

"My husband!" murmured Mrs. Lloyd.

SOME NEW RECIPES.

Braised Beef—One pound of chuck or juicy piece of beef, cut in cubes. Add cold water, put on back of stove two or three hours. At about one hour before serving boil down, having enough water left to make gravy. Season, thicken and always add a few celery leaves crushed in the hands and leave out the sticks, as you will find an improvement in flavor by beef. Serve with baked potatoes.

Chicken Terrapin—Cut chicken that has been boiled the day before into small pieces, about 3/4 cups. Put into saucepan with 1 ounce of butter, a very little red pepper, a pinch of salt and cook 5 minutes. Add wine glass of Madeira wine and boil 5 minutes. Have beaten the yolks of 3 eggs, to which is added 1/2 pint of cream and a little dust of flour. Add to the chicken, gently stirring until it thickens. Serve very hot with strips of buttered toast or with bread and butter sandwiches.

Lemon Cream Pudding—Beat yolks of 4 eggs and 4 or 5 tablespoons of sugar. Add juice of 1 lemon and the grated rind and 2 teaspoons of hot water. Cook in double boiler until thickened. Remove from fire and stir in whites of 4 eggs beaten with 2 tablespoons of sugar. Eat cold.

Split Pea Soup—Wash a pint of peas and soak them over night in plenty of cold water, then drain off the water and put them into a saucepan with 5 pints of cold water and 1 ham bone; boil 1 1/2 hours, about two hours, then add 1 turnip, 3 onions, 1 carrot, all cut up in pieces; add pepper and salt to taste, then cook for 30 minutes longer, then strain. Put the soup back in to boil, adding 1 grated carrot and serve hot with croutons.

Beef Loaf—Two pounds of cheap beef chopped fine, 1 egg, 2 crackers, 1 teaspoon salt, 1/2 teaspoon pepper, 1 teaspoon sage, 1/2 cup milk. Form into a loaf, put in pan and dot with pieces of butter. Have oven rather hot at first, and bake about 15 or 20 minutes without putting water in pan, then put in a cupful or more of water and bake frequently, baking it altogether about 1 1/2 hours. An onion may be chopped with meat and crackers if flavor is liked.

Designs for the Proposed Polymuriel, the New Dress and Hat for Universal Wear

HAVE you drawn your polymuriel yet?

Scores of women have been putting on paper their pet particular notions of a Polymuriel, a universal gown and a universal hat for women, which may be worn on all occasions and which must be characterized by beauty, simplicity, durability and comfort.

A prize of $100 has been offered for a design of the most likely gown and hat for the hat. The contest closes May 31. Designs are to be sent to the Polymuriel Prize Fund Committee, 538 Riverside Drive, New York City.

Each sketch should be signed in the upper right-hand corner with an assumed name of the designer, and should be accompanied by a sealed envelope bearing the assumed name on the outside and containing a slip inscribed

Bobby Pink Pig

By Mrs. F. A. Walker.

AUNT MARY had sent her little nieces and nephews a box stuffed with beautiful presents; there were daintily dressed dolls, and wonderful story books, and the squeakiest jack-in-the-box, and a brand-new set of furniture and dishes for the doll house, and a cute little roast turkey and plum pudding for the doll's dinner.

All these the children were to divide, but when they came to opening the box and choosing, Bobby spelt all their pleasure. He had been quite sick, and everyone had let him have his way so much now he was very, very spoiled. Every pretty thing took from the box, Bobby insisted must be his and would grow angry until it was given to him.

So the other children fared very badly. Now, at the bottom of the box Aunt Mary had put a pink plush pig, a gorgeous little pig, with the sunniest pink snout poking saucily out. When they took it out and unrolled it from the crinkly paper there was a cry of delight. The children said it must belong to them all, but Bobby insisted it, too, must be his, and, in spite of the tears of the other kiddies, he took it.

That night, long after the other children were dreaming of their new skates and sleds, Bobby woke up and tossed about the bed, hunting a sleepy corner; for, though nurse had begged him not, he had eaten too much cake at supper, and now could not sleep.

At last he decided he was thirsty, and called fretfully for water. But no one heard him, so he tumbled sleepily out of bed, clutching his little silver mug. Bobby had never been out of bed alone at night before, and was a wee bit frightened at first at the silence and shadows, but he knew there were not really any bugaboos that hurt little boys, so he trudged through the nursery on his way to the bathroom. As he passed by the doll house he heard an odd little voice say:

"Dinner is ready. I do wish you would all come before the turkey gets cold." Bobby looked at the doll house and there, in the doorway, stood a little doll fanning her pink cheeks with her apron. He sat down in wonder, while the dolls of the nursery family came tripping in and sat down to the doll dinner. Last came the pink plush pig, rudely pushing everyone out of his way.

"I want the biggest chair," he grunted, and plumped himself down in it, although Maria Ann, the oldest doll in the nursery, always sat there. The other dolls frowned, but Maria Ann merely said, quietly: "You know, they have all kinds of ill-bred toys in the shops these days; he hasn't been in our family long enough to learn good manners."

BUT when the pink plush pig ate up most of the turkey and put half the plum pudding on his plate, the others were angry and disgusted with him. And after dinner he seemed to be all over the doll house, taking the best of everything, paying no attention to the protests of the little dolls except to scold them. Bobby was furious with the way his pig acted, and wanted to get up and spank him soundly, but he found he could neither move nor speak. At last, when Maria Ann came down in the parlor and found the pink plush pig sitting with his feet on the table, even she grew angry.

"You are the rudest thing ever in this house!" she cried, indignantly. "I should think you would be ashamed of such manners!"

"Oh! not a bit," replied the pink plush pig, with an impudent grunt. "I do just like my little Master, Bobby."

"You are right," said Maria Ann.

collar at the back. For afternoon wear the gown is made more elaborate by the addition of a double tunic belted high with black velvet. The neck is lower than in the morning, and black velvet shoulder straps take the place of the plainer straps worn earlier in the day.

To adapt the dress for theater or wear in the evening two sections of sleeve are removed, making the sleeves end above the elbow, the neck is opened still more in back and front, while the heavy velvet belt and shoulder straps yield place to a more costly and delicate material.

The four Polymuriel hats might each of them be worn with propriety on almost any occasion. They combine simplicity and smartness and would not look out of place either in a business office or in a swell hotel dining room.

sadly. "Bobby has just such manners as yours; just what you might expect from a pink plush pig."

"I haven't! I haven't!" screamed Bobby, and just then his mother came in and found him sitting on the nursery floor, clutching his little silver mug and crying bitterly, so she cuddled him up and he was soon asleep.

Next morning Bobby insisted that the dolls had been talking, and he felt very much ashamed of what Maria Ann and the pig said about his selfishness. So he called the other children, and generously gave them good share of his toys. But he kept the pink plush pig, though he gave it a good, sound spanking, and just loved it to death, because it had made him learn how spoiled and selfish he had been.

HOW TO CURE A CHRONIC COUGH

Told in the Following Letter by a Jackson Man Who Knows from Experience. His Word Is Good.

"I am a carpenter, and the gripe left me not only with a chronic cough, but I was run-down, worn out and weak. I took all kinds of cough syrups but they did me no good. I finally got so weak I was not able to do a day's work, and coughed so much I was alarmed about my condition. One evening I read about Vinol and decided to try it. Before I had taken a quarter of a bottle I felt better, and after taking two bottles my cough is entirely cured, all the bad symptoms have disappeared and I have gained new vim and energy."—JOHN L. DENNIS, 711 Lynch Street, Jackson, Miss.

The reason Vinol is so successful in such cases is because the active medicinal principles of cod liver oil contained in Vinol rebuilds wasting tissues and supplies strength and vigor to the nerves and muscles while the tonic iron and wine assist the red corpuscles of the blood to absorb oxygen and distribute it through the system, thus restoring health and strength to the weak, emaciated organs of the body.

If Vinol fails to help you we return your money.

Betty Vincent's Advice.

THE time is quickly approaching when young men and women will seek outdoor pleasure resorts. I hope the readers of this column will remember that fun is not necessarily synonymous with rowdiness and vulgarity.

The girl who permits undue familiarity from her man companion, the young man in the street car who is rough and boisterous, simply brands themselves as persons unacquainted with polite society. They may annoy BETTY VINCENT those about them, but they harm no one as much as themselves. Liberty and gaiety are good things, but they should not degenerate into license.

"A. B." writes: "What should a bridesmaid wear at an afternoon wedding?"

If it is a formal wedding and the bride wears a white frock, the bridesmaid will naturally wear some light dress, with or without a hat.

"H. L." writes: "I care for a young man who works in the office with me. He does not pay any more attention to me than he does to the other girls. What can I do to make him like me best?"

First be yourself. Above all don't overdo anything in your overture for a closer friendship. Ask him to your home if a chance offers, then gain his friendship by talking over things you both like. A good friendship is always the basis of a good love affair. Always be dignified, yet chummy and never for-

des. He will soon see them if you have any. Propinquity will do the rest.

"E. S." writes: "What is the correct dress for a bridegroom at an afternoon wedding?"

The Jarr Family

Written for the Post-Dispatch
By Roy L. McCordell.Mr. Jarr's One Bachelor Friend
Has a Bit of Dime
Novel Luck.

WHILE Mr. Jack Silver was away on his errand of personal mercy—borrowing $10 from Mr. Jarr—Mr. Percy Pinkfinger was deeply engrossed in his game of "jacks." Mr. Pinkfinger made a false play, but seeing by the glass on the bureau on which he was playing that he hadn't seen it, he went right on, pretending the mischance had not occurred. He blushed, I think he would stoop to such an unsportsmanlike trick as to cheat himself; but he reasoned to himself that he had not seen himself do it and that it was his own fault if he did not watch himself to guard himself against cheating himself.

At this juncture the game was called on account of the intrusion of visitors. A rap sounded at the door, and Mr. Pinkfinger opened the top bureau drawer and permitted the little rubber ball to bounce in, then he swept in the jacks, closed the drawer and when the visitor entered—for it was too soon for Jack Silver to return from his errand of personal mercy—there was no incriminating evidence in sight to the brutal game of "jacks" as well as to soda water drinking and piano playing to excess.

The visitor was the landlady, with a telegram for Mr. Jack Silver. But Mr. Pinkfinger was a loyal friend. He handed the landlady's all-consuming curiosity.

"Did you sign for the telegram?" he asked.

The landlady nodded.

"Then that will be all, my good woman," said Mr. Pinkfinger in his best majestic floorwalker manner. "You can go now. I shall give it to Mr. Silver when he returns. Doubtless it is from his brokers regarding some of his financial operations." And Mr. Pinkfinger yawned and polished his nails on his faintly handkerchieved, and the landlady retired, abashed at his superior rhetoric and the grand manner which entitled Mr. Pinkfinger to lead the floorwalkers' annual elite reception and ball without a contesting rival.

When Mr. Silver returned with the $10 he had borrowed from Mr. Jarr, to redeem his dress coat and silk hat from the late ruthless invader of the little Belgium of his hall bedroom Mr. Pinkfinger handed him the telegram, and as Jack Silver was opening the envelope his visitor was wondering if he would have an opportunity of reprieving his ball and jacks out of Mr. Silver's upper bureau drawer without Mr. Silver seeing him. Mr. Pinkfinger thought to himself, "If it is bad news, and Jack turns aside to hide his manly tears, I may get back the ball and jacks without his seeing me. But I hope it is not bad news, for if he does find the ball and jacks in his bureau drawer I can disclaim all knowledge of them and suggest they were left there by a burglar!"

Mr. Pinkfinger had plenty of time to indulge in this retrospection, for his friend, Mr. Jack Silver, was gazing at the telegram as though stupefied. Then he emitted a loud, piercing whistle and exclaimed, "Good lord!" and handed the telegram to the visiting floorwalker.

Mr. Jack Silver's court has set aside your uncle's will leaving entire estate to Asylum for Sick Cats. You, as nearest of kin, will receive $600,000 as share, as in previous will when your late uncle was of sound mind.

STEELE & LYON, Attorneys.

"Bad news," asked the lucky legatee in a trembling voice. But his answer was the sound of a falling body and a crash of glass and the howl sound of a bureau drawer falling to the floor. Mr. Percy Pinkfinger had swooned at the glad tidings received by his friend. In swooning he had fallen across the little table in the hall bedroom, knocking the empty soda water glasses to the floor. In clutching at the nearest object to prevent himself from falling Mr. Pinkfinger had grasped the knob of the bureau drawer and had pulled the bureau drawer out and over on him and the incriminating jacks and little rubber ball bounced all over the room.

But, after all, the fates were kind. Percy Pinkfinger, in his exultation at the good news of the vine riches bringing them again to rest in his pockets, Mr. Silver never noticed the jacks and ball.

Mr. Pinkfinger soon revived, for never kills. And he, with Mr. Silver, proceeded arm in arm to the lair lair lair and gave that dragon furnished rooms such a "bawling out" that she was reduced to abject sobs and apologies. Then she recovered her nerve and asked Mr. Silver if he did not need a nice, motherly housekeeper. But Mr. Silver did not hear her request. He was on his way, still linked arm in arm with Mr. Pinkfinger, to Mr. Jarr's domicile to ask that friend in need if he wished an eight-cylinder car or a trip to the Panama Exposition.

Hard Work.

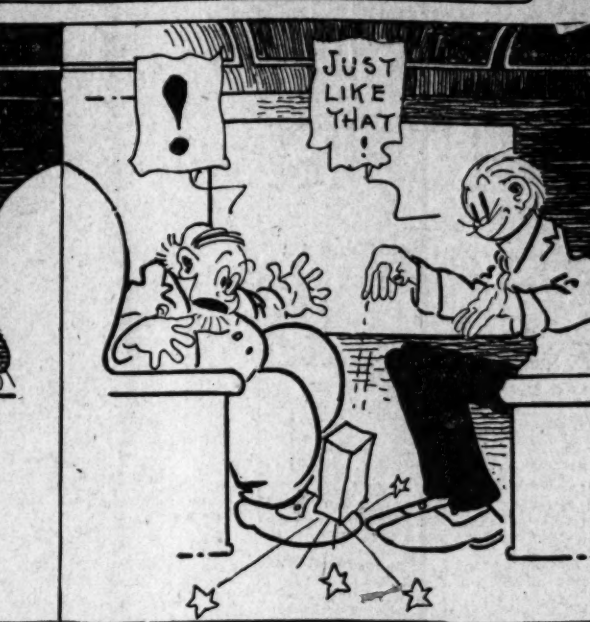

A. J. DREXEL, who is a volunteer in the automobile service of the British army, wrote in a recent letter to Philadelphia:

"As Kitchener said, or didn't say, our trenches stretch like a gray snake from Switzerland to the sea. And what hard work our young soldiers have, let me tell you, fighting these trenches! I saw a young soldier in a half-finished trench lay down his shovel the other day and light his pipe."

"Here, what did you lay down that shovel for?" the Sergeant said.

"To cool it, sir," said the young soldier. —Washington Star.

Slogans of Success

By Hazen Conklin.

MOST strong men are the result of exercise in overcoming obstacles.

THE man who refuses to "lower" himself by doing work "beneath his dignity" seldom gets "raised" either.

LONGING for opportunities doesn't find them half as quickly as "looking" for them.

THE man who studies "excuses" for his failure would do better to study "reasons" for it.

A Good Indication.

IT is noticeable that cartoonists picture the suffragist nowadays as a beautiful, stylishly dressed young woman, and the antisuffragist as an old, vinegar-faced person in the clothes of other days.

It hasn't been very long since the ugly old woman with a face like the hatchet she carried in her hand was the ballot seeker and the anti was a sweet, womanly woman.

Nothing more surely indicates the growth of the equal suffrage sentiment than the cartoonists' flip.—Savannah News.

A Wise Young Man.

R. UN quick!" cried the girl to her clandestine lover. "Papa is unchaining the big bulldog he bought yesterday! The brute will tear you to bits."

"No, he won't," said the lover calmly. "That dog is an old pet of mine. I raised him, and I hated to part with him; but I gave him to the dealer last week, with instructions to sell him to your father. Well, Bill, old chap. Glad to see me, ain't you? There, now—charge! What were you saying, darling?—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Not Missing Much.

B. EQUATE: I haven't tasted food for a month.

Dyspeptic: You ain't missing much. It's the same old taste.

True it is that money talks, but in many cases it cunts makes more noise than $10.—Philadelphia Telegraph.

Prolonging the Climax.

"Hey, youse! 'Tain't time fer de huggin' stunt! Wait till we gets to de end of de fillum!"

Along Toward June.

MANY a peaceful American household is today confronting the two great problems as to whether the long black coat that father had built for his own wedding can be forced to fit him now and how to frame up that wedding bell superstructure of green and white which is so becoming to beet-blushing bridegrooms.

Spring is having its way again, and "It's as easy now for hearts to be true as for grass to be green or skies to be blue: it's the natural way of living." We hope so, just as James Russell Lowell did when he wrote that.

The statisticians say that about every twelfth wedded couple is divorced, so our friends' chances of staying married to each other are 11 to 1.

This is as near a certainty as anything life affords, and any one pair can make that certainty absolute if they will. Our schools and daily life, our gospel of efficiency and success, all tend to build up a sort of shell of selfness, to interest people in their own selves and in their own doing. But the wisdom of marriage consists in knowing that there are others and in maintaining good will toward them.

We don't know whether the diet sharps agree with the man who wrote "Better a dinner of herbs where love is," but the old saying is everlastingly right. There is no hardship in life that mutual good will cannot make blessed, and there is no ease or power that ill will cannot turn to bitter ashes. The greatest thing on earth is to be understood by those dear to you, and the world loves lovers because they have the courage to attempt that paradise. And we do hope the bridegroom's shoes don't squeak! Collier's.

Had His Doubts.

WILL you love me forever and a day?" sighed the newly betrothed heiran.

"It all depends," replied the squire of an ancient but impoverished family. "Do you think your money will last that long?"
